Allies Ready To Negotiate $1,000,000,000 Plane Orders

Morgenthau Sees Agents; U. S. Lends China, Denmark, Iceland $31,000,000

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

A prospective billion dollars' worth of war orders buoyed the business outlook yesterday as Allied buying agents discussed with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau plans for immediate heavy aircraft purchases.

Another development was the announcement by Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones that the Export-Import Bank had authorized loans totaling $31,000,000 to China, Denmark and Iceland to enable them to buy American goods. He said also that Spain now is buying some 25,000 bales of American cotton monthly with proceeds from an earlier credit.

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins reported a "leveling off" in the rate of business decline during the last two weeks of February, though indications that would "point to an immediate reversal of the downward trend" were not seen.

To Negotiate Next Week

Amid all these business activities, American officials sat down with British and French experts in efforts to bring about more normal foreign trade, upset in the past few months by the wartime blockade of Germany.

Jones predicted, meanwhile, after a conference with President Roosevelt at the White House, that the present wars would not change the map of Europe very much.

"I think they will fight to a draw and then quit when they are tired of bleeding to death," he added.

He expressed belief Finland would repay the Export-Import Bank loans. Moreover, he thought the Finns still "may do a Bob Fitzsimmons" on Russia. (The reference was to Fitzsimmons' knockout of Corbett for the heavyweight boxing championship.)

Arthur B. Purvis, chief of the British-French purchasing mission in this country, said after the Morgenthau conference that mission representatives would begin negotiations with American aircraft manufacturers in New York early next week for the purchase of planes costing about $1,000,000,000.

He emphasized that the Allies wanted planes as rapidly as they can be delivered. Negotiations have been under way for the purchase of about 8,000 planes. Purvis said the whole order was wanted, if possible, within one year.

$20,000,000 for China

Jones announced—despite hints of retaliatory measures by Japan—a $20,000,000 loan to China to make nonmilitary purchases in this country. A $10,000,000 loan to Denmark and a $1,000,000 loan to Iceland likewise will finance nonmilitary purchases.

These loans increased to $76,000,000 advances by the bank since legislation was passed last week increasing the bank's lending power by $100,000,000. A $20,000,000 loan was authorized at once for Finland. Sweden received a $15,000,000 loan and Norway a $10,000,000 loan.

Possibility of a lift in European war purchases has been one of the factors behind the rally in the stock market this week. Large-scale aircraft purchases will serve to some extent as a brake, it is expected, on a mild downward tendency in industrial production, stimulating purchases and employment in numerous lines on which aircraft manufacturers are dependent.

Plans for the billion-dollar aircraft purchase program were has-

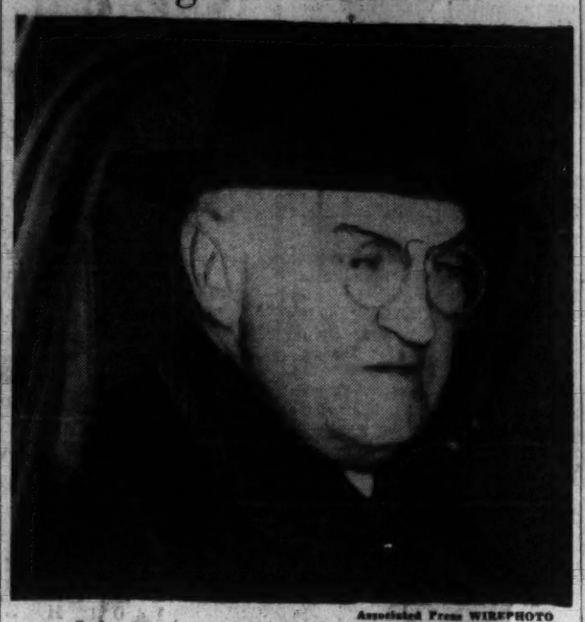
Manton Scowls, His Eyes Wet, As He Begins Prison Term



Associated Press WIREPHOTO
Judge Martin Manton en route to the penitentiary

By the Associated Press

Lewisburg, Pa., March 7.—Martin T. Manton, the Nation's tenth ranking jurist less than a year ago, is just another convict tonight.

Convicted of accepting favors from litigants, the aging former presiding judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in New York reached the Federal Penitentiary here at 3:35 p. m., Eastern standard time, today to begin a two-year sentence.

The automobile bearing him from New York whizzed through the prison gates amid extraordinary precautions to protect him from stares of the curious. Front and rear came four carloads of Pennsylvania State troopers and penitentiary guards.

Manton, once outranked only by the justices of the Supreme Court, crouched in the rear seat as the limousine swept him into the obscurity of prison. Sitting with him was United States Marshall Leo Lowenthal, to whom the former

Few Votes Again Save Hatch Act

Seven Senate Noes Block Adams' Move To Draw Sting From Politics Ban

Funds for Interior

The House passed an $118,578,167 Interior Department appropriation bill after cutting $1,000,000 from the funds provided for the bituminous coal division. Page 2.

Narrow Escape

By the United Press

The Senate yesterday beat down the second attempt in 24 hours to emasculate the Hatch "clean politics" bill, and neared a vote, probably today, on a measure to extend the act's ban on political activities by Federal employes to 250,000 State workers paid in whole or in part by Federal funds.

An amendment by Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), Colorado, to strike the Federal political ban from the original act, was defeated by a vote of 42 to 35 in the face of a warning by Senator Dennis Chavez (Democrat), New Mexico, that if the law remains on the statute books the Democratic Party will lose control of the House of Representatives.

Second in Two Days

Adams' amendment was the second introduced in successive days to permit Federal employes to participate in political campaigns. One by Senator John E. Miller (Democrat), Arkansas, was defeated Wednesday, 44 to 41.

Adams offered his motion as the Senate began its fourth day of debate on legislation by Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, to amend his original law so that Federal-paid State employes will be barred from political activities denied to all but policy-making or elected United States officials such as Cabinet members and Congressmen.

Opponents of the new legislation, which has been indorsed by President Roosevelt and Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, are almost all Democrats. One Republican, Senator Gurney of South Dakota, supported the opponents in the vote on Miller's motion yesterday.

In the Adams vote yesterday Barkley was able to enlist enough Democratic support to help swing the tide against the opposition.

Among normal Roosevelt supporters who spoke out against the Hatch amendments was Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who charged that extension of the political ban to State workers would be an invasion of States' rights.

"Proponents of this bill contemplate nothing more nor less than political emasculation," he said.

Teachers Hit

Under the proposed amendments, he continued, school teachers receiving compensation from Federal grants-in-aid would be unable openly to support candidates for the important State office of superintendent of public instruction.

Pepper arranged for an additional 15 minutes of speaking time today, after which the Senate will vote on a motion by Senator Francis T. Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, which, in effect, would kill the pro-

Farmers Wooed

By Robert C. Albright

Dormant millions for farm parity, surplus removal and tenancy aid came suddenly to life in the Senate yesterday as bipartisan farm blocs, aroused by farm organization demands and Midwestern election trends, clamored for action.

Net result was that the long-pending farm-aid measure was slated to displace the trade agreements bill before the Senate on Monday and threatened to provide the first serious check in this session's economy record.

A two-day round of conferences between Midwestern and Southern farm bloc leaders failed to reach informal agreement on a large net addition in the badly cut House farm bill. But added funds up to nearly $300,000,000 were being discussed as the agriculture appropriations subcommittee prepared to meet today.

Follows G. O. P. Gains

Courtship of farm sector votes was evident in legislative maneuvers by both parties as the green light was unexpectedly given for the farm bill. While political considerations were soft-pedaled, the call for swift farm aid action followed significantly on the heels of G. O. P. gains in Ohio and Iowa Congressional elections.

The more outspoken advocates of the unbudgeted parity payment appropriation made no secret of their desire to obtain farm appropriation increases in advance of the Administration's 1941 relief estimates. The last bill risks a break through the Treasury's statutory debt limit.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace meanwhile stressed the "nonpartisan" character of AAA farm dinner rallies to be held tonight in 22 States, attended by more than 300,000 farmers, and to be addressed via radio by President Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley and Wallace. The American Farm Bureau Federation recently warned against "official" participation of member units in the rallies because of political implications.

$300,000,000 at Issue

Wallace emphasized in a statement that while the Hatch Act does not apply to AAA community and county committeemen (who are not Federal employes), the AAA regulations governing the committees "strictly limit political activity."

Following the Wallace statement, Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, announced he would offer an amendment to the Hatch bill today to bring all AAA State, county and local committee members directly under Hatch Act political bans. The Shipstead amendment affects about 125,000 AAA community and county committeemen.

Addition of nearly $300,000,000 to the $713,996,256 farm bill was considered by Senate farm bloc leaders as Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, called a meeting of the Senate agriculture appropriations

A royal young man, Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, 27, brown-eyed, with a slight mustache and romantic accent, is in town with nothing particular to do, he said yesterday.

But he thinks "your country is marvelous;" that the Russians never would have taken the field without impetus from the Germans; that "they have shown in Finland that they cannot do much alone;" that he cannot say whether he wants to be King of the Danubian Federation he hopes to see established as an outcome of the war, and that 99 per cent of the Austrians are against the Reich.

Bitter Choice

Helsinki, Finland, March 7.—In a five-line typewritten bulletin handed to the press tonight, the Finnish government announced by implication that peace proposals were on their way here from Moscow. The self-explanatory note read:

"According to information in the possession of the Finnish government, the Soviet government is believed to have planned the presentation of demands to Finland more far-reaching in character than those presented last autumn. No details of these demands are available at the moment."

[From Copenhagen, the New York Times received a cable that all telephone and cable connections with Stockholm, where the negotiations are said to be going on, and all press services were cut off.

Augmented Demands

[From the various reports in Copenhagen the Times learned that the Finnish government has received a peace offer from the Soviet, and that the Finnish radio had stated at 9 last night that the offer contains "new and augmented demands upon Finland."

[Unconfirmed reports to the Times in Copenhagen, coming from Stockholm, set forth that the Western powers have demanded the right to march through Sweden to give Finland military aid.

[From Copenhagen also unconfirmed rumors were reported by the Times as coming from Stockholm saying that Finnish Field Marshal Carl Gustave Mannerheim has returned from the front declaring that he would abandon his lines unless immediate help was forthcoming.]

Finns Deprecate "Talk"

The announcement of the Helsinki government followed a statement made earlier in the day to this writer by Foreign Minister Vaenioe Tanner that he would neither confirm nor deny the newest peace rumors emanating from Stockholm, according to which Moscow, using the good offices of the Swedish government, had made peace overtures to Finland.

The Finnish statesman admitted that he had heard about these rumors "but I consider I ought not to comment. What I can say, though, is that there is no reason for the Finnish government to occupy itself with mere talk. Let those talk who like to talk."

Asked whether he thought that the latest rumor was nothing but a Soviet maneuver to blow up outside aid for Finland, the foreign minister replied "perhaps," reiterating that he had no desire to discuss the matter in detail.

Smith Group Asks Abolition Of Labor Board

Committee Minority Says Bill Threatens To 'Eviscerate' Law

Post Staff Writer

The spark for a Congressional battle of the first magnitude was touched off yesterday when a divided Smith committee presented its bill recommending abolition of the present Labor Board and drastic revision of the Wagner Act.

Representing the fruit of a lengthy investigation into the Labor Board and the law establishing it, the measure introduced yesterday was sponsored by Chairman Smith, conservative Virginia Democrat, and his two Republican colleagues, Representatives Routzohn, of Ohio, and Halleck, of Indiana.

The other two Democrats on the five-man committee, Representatives Healey, of Massachusetts, and Murdock, of Utah, both New Dealers, attacked the bill as one that would "eviscerate" and "threaten the principles, purposes and objectives" of the present labor act.

Independent Prosecutor

Smith declared that the proposed bill would preserve the fundamental right of collective bargaining and yet would remove causes of the controversy surrounding the Wagner Act and its administration.

The majority of the committee proposed replacing the existing three-man Labor Board with a new one of the same size, to be appointed by the President with senatorial approval. Chairman Smith pointed out that the President could rename the present members. Observers noted, however, that they would have to run the gantlet of the Senate.

Separation of the judicial and prosecuting functions of the present board is provided for in the amendments through the establishment of

Return of the pre-prohibition barroom and a ban on the Sunday sale of wine and beer were recommended by Maj. Brown, superintendent of police, yesterday in testimony before the Eberharter subcommittee investigating liquor licensing.

The police superintendent's suggestion drew criticism from wets and drys, and only bartenders gave him any support.

Declaring that the present restriction against serving alcoholic spirits to a person standing is "a backward step," Maj. Brown said:

"When drinkers stand up they can better feel when they approach intoxication and others can better judge when they are drunk."

Saloons Were Orderly

Enforcement of the law was simpler when saloons were in operation, the police chief said, and most of them were orderly.

"When prior to prohibition the number of bars in the District were restricted," he explained, "the saloon was kept orderly and enforcement was simpler than it is now."

The police superintendent, who has been a Sunday school teacher, said he favored an absolute prohibition against the sale of any alcoholic beverages on Sunday.

He also denounced the regulation which permits the sale of liquor between midnight Sunday and 2 a. m. Monday.

Favors 2 A. M. Closing

"I would rather see the bars remain open until 2 a. m. Sunday than to have them open at 12 o'clock Sunday night," he said.

He expressed the opinion that there would not be much objection to a 2 a. m. Sunday closing of bars in hotels and restaurants.

Dead Heaped On Ice as Finns Hold Viipuri

Battle Rages on Bay; Helsinki Reports New Fight in East

By Max Harrelson.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Helsinki, March 7.—Bitter fighting, described by military men as the bloodiest of the war, raged today across frozen Viipuri Bay where the Red army, ignoring losses in men and equipment, has been trying for five days to gain a foothold on the coast southwest of Viipuri.

The Finnish high command said the Russians had lost more than 30 tanks and uncounted numbers of men as they charged across the open ice fields all day yesterday, raked by coastal batteries and bombed from the air, but declared the invaders were continuing the assault.

Asserting the attempts to encircle the beleaguered city from the west thus far had failed, the Finns said their lines were holding firm from the capes at the bay mouth to Viipuri itself.

[The Associated Press reported early today from Moscow that the Soviet command reported its troops had captured the town of Nautsi on the Norwegian frontier in far northern Finland, making no mention of fighting on the Mannerheim Line.

London Fears Allied Defeat In Finn Peace

Russia and Germany Would Dominate Iron, British Say

By James B. Reston.

London, March 7.—Diplomatic dispatches reaching London today confirmed recent reports that Finland has received and is considering terms for an armistice in the Russo-Finnish war. This news aroused considerable consternation among Allied officials.

George Achates Gripenberg, Finnish minister, called at the foreign office today and conferred with Lord Halifax, but no inkling of the conversation was allowed to slip out.

While the British officials had nothing to say, it was evident from their attitude that the reports were taken seriously in official quarters, and there is no attempt to conceal the fact that a peace pact in which Finland, and therefore the Scandinavian peninsula, would be dominated by Germany and Russia would be regarded as an Allied defeat of great magnitude.

With Russians and Germans dominating Finland and the entire Scandinavian Peninsula, they would be in a position to demand all the iron ore they needed from the third largest iron ore region in the world at Gallivare, Kiruna and Kirunavaara, Sweden.

Betsey Roosevelt Granted Divorce In One Minute

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 7.—Betsey Cushing Roosevelt, whose brother testified "she had no desire for a divorce," was granted an interlocutory decree today from James Roosevelt, oldest son of the President in a hearing lasting one minute.

Superior Judge Thomas C. Gould approved terms of a property settlement under which she receives $85,000 immediately and has a choice between $50,000 additional in five years or $5,000 annually until she remarries.

In addition, the two children, Sara Delano, and Kate, 4, will receive monthly payments until they are 21, totaling more than $78,000. They were placed in the mother's custody.

Mrs. Roosevelt did not appear in court today.

She came here, after answering her movie producer-husband's complaint and filing a cross-complaint asking for the divorce, to testify last Friday that relations between her and Roosevelt had been strained since he first asked for his freedom in May, 1938.

Edwin Markham Dies Waiting For a Poem to Stop War

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—Edwin Markham, 87, author of "The Man With the Hoe" and other famous poems, tonight made good a promise to himself. He went "to explore the mysteries of the dead."

Declared incompetent by the courts, plagued by a failing memory, beset by age and infirmities, he would not admit, the aged poet said recently, that when death overtook him it would find "not a querulous old man but a young fellow intrigued with the greatest adventure of all."

Markham was almost—but not quite—ready to die when pneumonia set in on Tuesday and drew him down to his death tonight. He had collected some 1,500 of his poems, as he had said he would, but he never saw the greatest poem of all time, which he fondly hoped some younger man would produce before his death.

"That," he said, "would be five or six stanzas which would disperse the armies of the world. If I had the time, the youth, the strength to write one great poem, it would be against war. If I could have one wish fulfilled, it would be for a poem that would expose the mockery, the futility, the sterility of war in such a way as to warn every man who loves the world and humanity to watch vigilantly against war."

Markham did not have the time, the youth and the strength; and no other poet had the ability.

At his death, Markham had forgotten completely his famous lines which children often are compelled to memorize and which many adults frequently quote. He lived his last few months again as a child in the West, where he was once a cowboy. The 30,000 volumes that covered the walls of the old house in which he lived he saw as open sow country in May, 1938.

Queen Elizabeth Docks With Crew of 400; Mine Cable Hangs High Above Water Line

Two Mounted Pillbox Housings Resemble Observation Posts

By John A. Moroso 3d
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 7.—The 85,000-ton British liner Queen Elizabeth, the biggest vessel ever built, found shelter here tonight at the end of a spectacular nose-thumbing dash across the North Atlantic.

She arrived at her dock at 4:40 p. m., with no visible armament, but protected by a new cable hanging high above the water-line and designed to set up electrical impulses to nullify magnetic mines.

To berth here safe from German bombs—and perhaps to exhibit the power of the King's navy—she had braved German submarines for 3,000 miles.

Elizabeth's Dash Began as 'Drill'

New York, March 7 (U.P.).—Capt. John G. Townley and 377 other British seamen went aboard the liner Queen Elizabeth last Saturday for a "boat drill" which ended tonight in New York.

The captain said that when he boarded the ship for a "boat drill," he carried secret, sealed orders. When the liner was at sea he broke the seal and found that he was off to New York.

"I wasn't asked to bring the ship over," he said grimly. "I was told to bring her over."

But as she came up the bay—this mighty ship into whose construction had gone nearly $30,000,000 in British money—she made it a ponderously routine business, without the slightest hint of fanfare.

She was a deliberately ugly monster, her clean, functional lines almost obscured by the dirty gray paint that had been slapped over her vast surface as camouflage.

She brought a skeleton crew of 300 to 400 men—including a cocky little tar who shouted "Very nice trip; lovely"—and carried two mounted pillbox housings which looked like observation posts.

The first to greet her, a little pot-bellied tug pushing out on a work-a-day errand, loosed three blasts and the Elizabeth's hoarse whistle roared three solemn responses.

Her officers lounged casually on

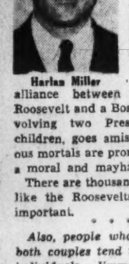
1,000,000 RESTLESS YOUNG ROOSEVELTS

Divorce can happen to anyone, so there is perhaps too much tch-tch and clucking and tongue-wagging about the termination of Jimmy Roosevelt's marriage with Betsey Cushing, a college romance which couldn't stand the fierce heat of the White House, whose occupants are fully entitled to such privacy as they can attain.



Harlan Miller

But when an alliance between a Hyde Park Roosevelt and a Boston Cushing, involving two Presidential grandchildren, goes amiss, less conspicuous mortals are prone to try to draw a moral and mayhap adorn a tale.

There are thousands of young men like the Roosevelts, and they are important.

* * * *

Also, people who have observed both couples tend to agree that as individuals Jimmy and Betsey Roosevelt are of greater consequence and significance today than Edward, whilom King and present Duke of Windsor, and his Duchess, and worthier of study by the average modern young wife and husband.

* * * *

Marriage with a young Roosevelt is no cushy assignment in Utopia. Currently they are a restless breed, not greatly given to serenity and (unlike their father) the fireside joys.

I have never seen a complete family tree of the White House family. But among the 64 great-great-great-great grandparents of the younger Roosevelts there must have been a merman, a gypsy, an adventurer, a troubadour or two.

"—what happens to marriage"

Right there, curiously enough, lurks a strange oversight of the genealogists.

If it matters at all who some of a man's ancestors were, then it matters who all of them were.

We all know that 300 years ago there was a Dutch ancestor named Roosevelt. Even before that there was a de la Noye.

* * * *

But who were the other 62, or 126, or 254 ancestors, depending on how far back you go? Each one of them influenced the Roosevelt character as much as the Roosevelts and the Delanos.

Who were the shadowy Smiths and Joneses and Robinsons in the family tree?

It's a fascinating speculation. But I must leave it to the genealogical experts.

Back to the younger Roosevelts who are definitely of the 1920's and 1930's and 1940's. They are interested in insurance, radio, advertising, politics, journalism, movies. They are the sort of young men that thousands of well-bred girls will be wanting to marry, or marrying, or wanting to keep married.

* * * *

How can their furious pursuit of 1940-style success be harnessed with the gentler triumphs of matrimony and domesticity?

All these young men are after big money. Six years ago Elliott, when he was 24, said he needs a minimum of $15,000 a year to keep body and soul together tolerably. Now he would probably put it at $25,000 or $30,000.

This is strange enough in the sons of a father who is no enthusiast for great fortunes and great incomes.

"—after the horse & buggy?"

What can a young wife do about this? Can she safely devote herself to her children and the joys of such home life as remains, while her husband storms around the landscape after the big money, acquiring stomach ulcers and no repose?

Or must she persuade him that $10,000 or $15,000 is enough, with a slow pull to the future? Or even less?

* * * *

Can the wife of a young man in the spotlight remain a home body? Or must she be as active as he is, carve out a career of her own, let him do half the wondering and worrying? Must she share the limelight with him? Is Eleanor Roosevelt ahead of her generation?

* * * *

Is it safe for a young girl with only one youth to live, remembering the long decades that come after, the afternoon and sunset decades, to marry too much ambition, too much money-madness? Is such ambition a social force or anti-social force?

* * * *

Are the young Roosevelts, or some of them, the best rebuttal of their father's theories, or their best proof? Is the old-fashioned marriage a vanishing phenomenon of the horse-and-buggy era, for young men with zip?

It may be impertinent to choose the President's sons for such speculations. But meditation loves a shining mark—a prince, a duke or a Presidents' son.

House Votes $118,000,000 For Interior

Roosevelt's Figure Slashed $3,479,277; Coal Funds Pared

By the Associated Press

The House, after cutting $1,000,000 from funds for the bituminous coal division, passed and sent to the Senate today the bill appropriating $118,578,187 for the Interior Department for the year beginning next July 1.

The cut in the coal division funds reduced that item to $1,187,800.

The bill as passed represented a cut of $3,479,277 below President Roosevelt's Budget estimates.

The measure carries funds for several establishments and projects in the District, including Freedmen's Hospital, Jefferson Memorial grounds, Howard University, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Columbia Institution for the Deaf, and National Capital parks.

Allen Asks Coal Slash

Representative Allen (Democrat), Pennsylvania, long an opponent of the Guffey Coal Act, proposed the coal division cut, saying the division had failed to accomplish its purpose of setting minimum prices for sale of coal at the mines after five years of effort.

The House voted to ban departmental radio programs broadcast to support pending legislation, after laughing at the melodrama in an Interior Department script on oil conservation.

The script, which Representative Gossett (Democrat), Texas, said was intended to show what happens in a country "run dry of oil" recited tales of a stalled Navy, unworkable artillery, shut down plants and of a railroad gateman telling a prospective passenger:

"The Twentieth Century is unable to move. You'll have to take a stage coach to New York."

Cole Agrees to Ban

Representative Cole (Democrat), Maryland, whose pending oil conservation bill was at issue, agreed to the radio ban, saying the broadcast was the work of "over-zealous" young men.

An exemption for State, Federal and municipal government from provisions of the Guffey Coal Act was eliminated by the House.

The exemption would have made it possible for governmental subdivisions to purchase their coal supplies without regard to rulings of a Federal division created to set minimum prices for sale of soft coal at the mines.

"Certainly it is very clear that this is legislation in an appropriation act," said Representative Edmiston (Democrat), West Virginia. His point of order that the proposal could not be included in the Interior appropriations bill was upheld.

Representative Fitzpatrick (Democrat), New York, arguing for inclusion of the exemption, contended it would mean a saving in funds for the Federal Government in administrative costs by removing approximately 3,500,000 tons of coal, or about 8 per cent of the national production, from control of the coal division.

Officials of New York City have contended that the proposed minimum prices for coal would mean large increases in the city's fuel bill.

At odds on the Senate floor since the inception of the Hatch act to purify politics have been Senators Carl Hatch (left), author of the bill, and Sherman Minton, of Indiana, Democratic whip.

posed amendments. Maloney said the proposals would be a "harsh trespass upon the rights of the States."

Hatch and other leaders appeared confident they would defeat the motion and bring the bill to successful passage.

Chavez told his colleagues he regretted being unable to support Hatch. The philosophy of the entire act is to spread bureaucratic rather than legislative government, he added.

"Why must the Government be hypocritical," he asked. "The law isn't being enforced and they're not enforcing it. Go to the Census Bureau and unless you can get clearance from a Senator or a Congressman you can't get a job."

The only other important vote came on adoption of an amendment to permit employes found guilty of violating the act to appeal to the Federal courts.

Introduced by Senator John A. Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, it was adopted by a vote of 48 to 36. It has been defeated on a standing vote Wednesday.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 7.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, one of the most active women ever to live in the White House, wins a strong vote of approval from her fellow countrymen in a national survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion. Results indicate that the "First Lady" is, in fact, more popular than her husband, the President.

GALLUP

Because use of widespread criticism of Mrs. Roosevelt's part in the American Youth Congress and because no other President's wife has been so much a topic of conversation as Mrs. Roosevelt, the Institute set out to test the Nation's reaction toward her. It found that she is just as popular today, as she was a year ago when a similar study was made.

More Popular With Young

She is more popular with young voters than with older voters and more popular with the low-income groups than the upper income groups, but throughout virtually all classes and ages she has many more friends than enemies.

The comments typical of the majority in the survey give a picture of what the public likes:

"She is a great lady doing good work."

"She has worked for the underdog."

"With her intelligent mind and ability she has set a good example for American women."

68 Per Cent Show Approval

The survey was conducted in exactly the same manner as the Institute's regular monthly studies of President Roosevelt's popularity. The question was:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Mrs. Roosevelt has conducted herself as 'First Lady'?"

	Approve	Disapprove
Today	68%	32%
Year ago	67	33

The latest study of her husband's popularity indicates that 64 per cent approve Mr. Roosevelt as President.

49 Per Cent of G. O. P. Approves

Mrs. Roosevelt is much more popular among Democrats than she is among Republicans, the poll shows, with 84 per cent of the Democrats voting in her favor. But it is interesting to note that nearly one-half of the Republicans (49 per cent) also say they approve of her as "First Lady."

The voters who disapprove give several reasons. Typical of these reasons are the following:

"She should spend more time in the White House."

Where Least Appreciated

	Approve	Disapprove
Upper Income Group	56%	44%
Middle Income Group	68	32
Lower Income Group	75	25

By age groups the results show less variation. Those under 30 years of age approve of Mrs. Roosevelt by 77 per cent; those between 30 and 50 years by 70 per cent; and those 50 and over by 61 per cent.

Does U. S. Public Favor a Peace Conference Now?

The Gallup Poll in Sunday's Post gives you the answer—most important in the light of Mr. Welles' mission abroad.

If Hitler and the Allies leave the door open for a genuine peace move from U. S., should the President take further steps for reconciliation?

If a peace conference occurs, should U. S. take part in it?

America voices its opinion on these questions in the Poll in Sunday's Post.

Loans Free Of AAA Rules, Black Asserts

Denies FCA Will Make Compliance Requisite To Obtaining Funds

Governor A. G. Black, of the Farm Credit Administration, said yesterday that his agency will not force farm borrowers to comply with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration program, as a prerequisite for obtaining loans.

Black, appointed to head the agency after it was removed from independent status to the Agriculture Department by Presidential reorganization order, told the House Agriculture Committee that the FCA had not required such compliance and did not intend to do so.

The question of what effect the FCA's transfer to the department has had on farm loan policy was raised by Representative Andresen, in the first hearing on a bill to revise the FCA loan structure.

Noncommittal On Bill

Introduced by Chairman Jones (Democrat), of Texas, of the Agriculture Committee, the bill would reduce interest on Federal Land Bank and land bank commissioner loans to 3 per cent, provide Government guarantee for all farm-loan bonds, and retire capital stock of the land banks.

Black told the committee that if interest rates on land bank and land bank commissioner loans were fixed at 3 per cent it might make for efficiency, to consolidate the two types of loans. The land-bank loans, first mortgage obligations, now bear 3½ per cent interest, while commissioner loans, second mortgage obligations bear 4 per cent.

The FCA Governor said the bill had not been examined by the Agriculture Department and added that he wanted to refrain from approving or disapproving it in yesterday's hearing.

More Information Sought

He said, however, that elimination of stock ownership would break with farm bank practices and leave farm borrowers without a direct financial interest in operation of the land banks.

Chairman Jones asked Black to return at 10:30 a. m. today. Jones said that while committee opinion on FCA independence was divided, it is likely additional information will be sought. He said the hearings will last four or five days.

The bill, sponsored in the Senate by Senators La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin; Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, and Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, is also before the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency.

G.O.P. Hopefuls Are All Duds, Farley Says

Tells Md. Democrats None Now in Field Costs Him Any Sleep

By the Associated Press

Towson, Md., March 7.—Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley asserted tonight the Republican Presidential candidates already in the field were "hardly the type" to cause Democrats "sleepless nights or anxious days."

"Far from fanning the flame of public enthusiasm, they have failed to excite even a flicker of popular approval," Farley said in an address prepared for delivery at the annual banquet of the Associated Young Democrats of Baltimore County.

It may be, he said, that before the Republican convention "the miracle will happen" and an "ideal candidate may spring forth," but "unless the unexpected does happen, frankly I see small reason for concern among us Democrats."

In the last seven years, Farley said, the Democratic Administration had met its responsibilities and had given the Nation "constructive leadership," while the Republicans had "failed to develop leaders of outstanding national caliber."

He referred indirectly to Senator Taft, of Ohio; Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, as G. O. P. Presidential aspirants and directly mentioned former President Hoover as "willing to make the supreme sacrifice."

The Postmaster General did not mention any Democratic Presidential candidates, but advised his audience: "You may rest assured that the nominees will be worthy of the party and worthy of the high offices to which they aspire."

"The first requisite for victory is a united and militant party," he told the Young Democrats. "That is your job and mine, and if we do the part well, there can be no doubt about the outcome of the November election."

Farley said some Republican leaders "long once again for a 'safe' President—meaning, of course, a Chief Executive who will do their bidding and let things drift" but others "are keenly alive to the danger of this course."

"The country is not in the mood, in this time of troubled world affairs," he asserted, "to ratify a Presidential candidate who was selected, not because of his talent for leadership, but because of his lack of it."

Declaring the "country wants a continuance of sane and progressive government," Farley added:

"The electorate will never willingly return to the old haphazard method of drift and reaction. The opposition knows the temper of the public; it will offer a diluted form of the Democratic program in the guise of something new.

"We must be prepared to meet that type of campaign."

Farley Urged to Run

Postmaster General Farley was proposed yesterday as New York's favorite son candidate for the Presidential nomination by Representative Martin J. Kennedy (Democrat), of New York, in a letter to Gov. Lehman of New York.

Kennedy asserted that he believed President Roosevelt would not run for a third term and urged Lehman to "give voice to the demands of the liberal and progressive group within our party" for Farley's nomination.

In another part of his letter, Kennedy said the "people in opposition to the party forces of reaction" would again be "forced to vote national political life."

2 More Homes Sinking, D. C. Orders 50 Out

Row Dwellings Starting to Settle Over Sewer Diggings

Two additional units of a row dwelling that started to settle in the direction of the District's sewer tunnelling operations in the 1500 block of Twenty-second street northwest, were fenced off yesterday and their 50 occupants ordered to evacuate.

An official of the city engineering department, meanwhile, estimated that the bill for repairing the building would be at least $15,000.

Tenants in the buildings affected by the order are Mrs. Bessie I. Bailey, 1534 Twenty-second street, and Mrs. Delphia Koch, 1530-32 Twenty-second street. Both Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. Koch operate tourist homes. Mrs. Bailey houses 10 guests in addition to herself, daughter and two servants.

Mrs. Koch's tourist home extends to 1530 Twenty-second street. Though only the house at 1532 was ordered evacuated, Mrs. Koch said the population of both her houses would move. She has 30 roomers. Her son, R. Glenn Forbes, a rooming house broker, and a daughter, Mae Forbes, live with her.

Admiral Stays

The only tenant of the building who has not yet found it necessary to flee the threat of cracked walls and sagging floors is Rear Admiral Alexander Van Keuren, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Construction and Repair, at 1528 Twenty-second street.

Seventeen persons were forced to find new homes Wednesday when the District fenced off and ordered evacuated the residence of H. W. Campbell, 2200 Q street northwest. A 3-foot section of Campbell's front lawn disappeared under the Twenty-second street pavement, cracks appeared in his floors and ceilings and old cracks in the walls opened up as much as an inch and a half in a single day.

District Building Inspector John W. Oehmann declared the portion of the building occupied by Campbell, his wife, son and 14 roomers, "unsafe for occupancy."

"There is no telling what might happen to the other homes we closed," he said. "If 2200 Q street should collapse the homes on Twenty-second street adjoining it might go, too. In any event, it's not worth taking a chance with human lives."

District engineers in charge of project supervision described the closing of the Bailey and Koch homes as "purely precautionary."

To Be Repaired

Thomas W. Marshall, consulting engineer hired by the contractor, Joseph Lombardi Co., to supervise repairs to the building, estimated they would take about three weeks. Work on the sewer tunnel under Twenty-second street, part of a $3,500,000 project, will be held up until the building has been made safe.

Engineers announced yesterday that blasting for the tunnel definitely was not the cause of the sinking. They said the tunnel had tapped water out of the soil, dried it and caused it to be compressed under the weight of the building.

They cited that test borings failed to disclose presence of a ravine and water course, filled in since Civil War days. The old stream, it was said, either found a new subterranean course or filtered through the soil in large quantities so that the entire character of the earth changed as soon as it was drained.

Many tenants depend on their tourist home business for a livelihood. Mrs. Koch estimated the value of her business at $5,000 and said she had been offered $4,500 for it recently. They had prepared their homes to take advantage of the Easter tourist rush.

Y. M. C. A. to Stage Program Tonight

A flying trapeze artist, a group of girl gymnasts, six men who specialize in hand-balancing pyramids and a variety of other performers will take part in the "gym night" program at the Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock tonight.

Proceeds will be used to send the senior gymnastic team to the national Y. M. C. A. meet.

A demonstration of advanced gymnastics will be performed by four girls, including Margaret Weismann, of New York, who holds several championships.

Blood Bank's Goal of $5,000 Virtually Assured As Campaign Receipts Pass $4,000 Mark

$600 Raised By Legion Is En Route

That the Children's Hospital blood bank campaign will reach its goal of $5,000 was virtually assured yesterday, as receipts passed the $4,000 mark. The total does not include approximately $600, which has been raised by various American Legion parties, but which is yet in transmission.

Meanwhile, plans were announced for a gala carnival night to be sponsored by the Variety Club on March 30 and progress reported on arrangements for the Connecticut Avenue Association fashion show at the Hotel Mayflower next Monday. Proceeds from both events will go into The Post-WJSV fund for maintenance of the blood and serum bank at Children's Hospital.

Public Invited

Still another benefit will be held tonight, when Washington Police and Fre Post and Auxiliary unit, American Legion, sponsor a card party at Joppa Lodge, 4209 Ninth street northwest.

Mrs. Fred A. Rohrs, chairman of the special committee on the Variety Club's carnival night program, said the public as well as members and invited guests would be welcome at the party, to be held in the Willard Hotel clubrooms. Admission will be free and there will be several prizes, Mrs. Rohrs declared. Blood bank revenue will be via the midway concessions and games which will be featured.

Serving on the committee with Mrs. Rohrs are Mrs. A. E. Lichtman and Mrs. Rudolph Berger.

Connecticut avenue fashion shops were beehives of activity yesterday as managers, buyers and couturiers prepared for their exhibits at the Mayflower style show next Monday. Three performances will be given—at 2, 5 and 8 p. m.—with Marshall Adams, The Post fashion editor, as commentator.

Since each of the 20 shops participating may model only two gowns or furs on the mannequin runways, the stores are striving to select their very best fashion numbers.

This does not mean, however, that only expensive creations will be shown, officials explained. On the contrary, as many popular-priced garments will be shown as costly one, they said.

Perhaps the busiest committee chairmen this week are George Roberts, of the Dupont Circle Flower Shop, who is in charge of decorations, and Leroy Thayer, head of the dance studio bearing his name, who is arranging an elaborate entertainment program.

Receipts yesterday in the blood bank drive included the following:

Washington unit of the American Bridge Association, $37.10 ($86 previously transmitted); senior class at Georgetown University medical school, $8; Department of Commerce Post, No. 45, American Legion, $25; Sergt. Jasper Auxiliary unit, American Legion, $50; Kenneth H. Nash Post, No. 8, $10; Congress Heights P.-T. A., $5.

Bilbo Offers Bill to Revise District Code

Upon request of the District Bar Association, Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, yesterday introduced a bill providing for the appointment of a commission of five lawyers to rewrite the District code.

The proposal was made despite the fact that the House last year appropriated $32,000 to the House Committee on Revision of the Laws to revise the District code.

While employes of the committee said that this work was under way, Washington attorneys sponsoring the Bilbo resolution called it inadequate. The House committee was merely making another compilation, whereas the bar association wants the code entirely rewritten.

The code has not been revised since 1901, it was said, and contains many obsolete statutes of the "horse and buggy days." It carries provisions exempting cows from garnishment and explains the authority of nonexistent justices of peace and an orphans' court, for instance.

Bilbo's bill provides that at least four members of the commission shall be members of the District bar, three of whom must have had ten years experience or more. They would be appointed by the Attorney General with the approval of the District Court.

The commission must complete its work within three years, and each member would be paid $6,000 annually.

'Blossom Time' Substituted As Cherry Festival Music

Fireworks and Operetta to Be Staged Both Evenings; Poster Contest And Parade Route Announced

Music of "Blossom Time," instead of sea songs from "Pinafore," will accompany Washington's spring Cherry Blossom Festival, it was decided yesterday.

The festival committee announced the change in musical plans in a meeting at the Board of Trade offices.

Also announced were the parade route from the Capitol to Lincoln Memorial and plans for a Cherry Blossom poster contest, open to local art schools.

Plenty of fireworks will be displayed at the Tidal Basin and an abbreviated version of the operetta "Blossom Time" will be presented on a waterfront stage at the basin's west end, both evenings of the celebration, April 5 and 6.

The spring festival parade, led by the Cherry Blossom Queen, Rose Colliflower, will start from the Capitol at 1:45 p. m. April 6, swing along Constitution avenue and past the President's reviewing stand at Sixteenth street northwest. The paraders will turn on Seventeenth street, march south to the John Paul Jones statue and west from there to the end of the route at the Lincoln Memorial.

Miss Colliflower, daughter of James E. Colliflower, vice president of the Board of Trade, visited the committee and met Bethesda's Cherry Blossom Queen, Miss Ann Hagner. Others who attended the meeting included Chairman Edgar Morris, L. Gardiner Moore, Maj. Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr., Alvin Q. Ehrlich and Harrison Brand, jr.

14 Register As Hospital Opens Doors

Ten Operations, Possibly a Baby Scheduled Today

The swanky doors of Doctors Hospital at 1815 I street northwest opened for business yesterday, and by the end of the day registration cards had been filled out by 14 patients—12 of them women.

No. 1 patient was Miss Jane VerPlank, who came all the way from Geneva, N. Y., to gain the distinction. Second patient was John A. MacCollunt, of 2515 Thirteenth street northwest, and the third was Miss Sarah Burkett, 702 Ingraham street northwest.

All of the 14 first-comers were adults. The hospitals pediatric department will be opened in a few days. Notwithstanding the preponderance of women among the pioneer 14, no maternity cases were admitted yesterday. That department will go into operation this morning for the first time.

First Operation Today

Today's "firsts"—and "firsts" of one sort or another will continue for days, perhaps weeks—will include the first surgical operation to be performed in Doctors Hospital. Ten operations are scheduled, beginning at 8 a. m.

It is not improbable that the stork will make its first call there today also. That first baby, whoever it is, will make its entrance among such glistening surroundings and equipment as have awaited the arrival of no other child in the Washington vicinity.

A tour was conducted at 4 p. m., but throughout the day individuals came in to test the easy chairs in the hotel-like lobby, peek inquisitively into the delivery rooms (unoccupied) and view downtown Washington from the eleventh floor solarium roof.

Flowers Sent to Gallinger

According to Charles E. Vadakin, administrator, 150 doctors, nurses and other staff members were on the job yesterday and the number will be gradually increased to a maximum of 225 as the hospital fills up. The institution has 246 beds and 65 bassinettes.

The flowers which were received for the "open house" ceremonies Wednesday, when 6,432 persons inspected the building, were sent to Gallinger Hospital yesterday.

E. B. Nixon Heads The Wanderbirds

The Wanderbirds Hiking Club, which will go on outings tomorrow and Sunday, remained stationary long enough to elect officers as follows:

Edgar B. Nixon, president; W. Howard Ball, vice president; Mary A. Savage, executive secretary; Anne T. O'Donohue, corresponding secretary; Rose Marie Smith, treasurer. The chairmen are Daniel P. Johnson, trails; George L. Skirm, entertainment; Herbert C. Peterson, publicity.

The club will bicycle to Alexandria tomorrow afternoon, and take a 9-mile hike Sunday from Derwood, Md., to Gaithersburg.

Chicago Rites Make Stritch Archbishop

Prelate Installed Over Largest U. S. Archdiocese

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 7.—Slender, scholarly Archbishop Samuel Alphonsus Stritch ascended the throne of the Nation's largest Catholic see today.

The prelate was installed as head of the Chicago Archdiocese in a brilliant ceremony in the capacity-taxed Holy Name Cathedral.

The ancient ritual was witnessed by 14 archbishops and 90 bishops—representing the greatest gathering of the American hierarchy here since the Eucharistic Congress in 1926—and hundreds of clergymen, public officials and communicants.

They looked on while the archbishop, roped in white and gold cope and crowned with a tall, peaked, brimless miter, took his place on a high-backed, hand-carved, velvet-cannopied chair on the right side of the altar. At that moment he became the spiritual leader of 1,400,000 members of the faith in the city and surrounding counties. They constitute the largest Catholic population in any episcopal district in the United States.

Archbishop Stritch sounded a note of humility in his inaugural address.

He dedicated himself to the task of carrying on the mission begun by Father Marquette, who brought the Cross to Lake Michigan's shores.

Archbishop Stritch, 52, entered the service of his church as an altar boy in Nashville, Tenn. His labors as a priest were rewarded by appointment as Bishop of Toledo, Ohio. Thence he moved to the post of Archbishop of Milwaukee. Early this year Pope Pius XII named him successor to the late George Cardinal Mundelein.

Sharecroppers To Meet Tonight

A national sharecroppers week mass meeting will be sponsored by the Southern Tenant Farmers Union at 8:30 o'clock tonight at Friends Meeting Hall, 2111 Florida avenue northwest.

Amberson, of Baltimore, chairman of the survey on "The Plight of the Sharecropper;" Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman of the Negro Labor Committee; Prof. Carl Taylor, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and H. L. Mitchell, executive committeeman, S. F. T. U.

Colston Is Honored

Walker H. Colston, president of Beitzel & Co., has been appointed to the Medal of Valor committee for the Rainbow Division Veterans, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Swiggett to Speak

Dr. Glenn Levin Swiggett, educator and former State Department attache, will discuss a meeting of the Washington Round Table in the National Press Club today. He will speak on Mexico.

Wets and Drys Both Oppose Old Brass Rail

Only Bartenders Support Brown On Vertical Drinking

If Maj. Ernest W. Brown is to bring the old mahogany bar and brass rail back to the District, it looks as though he'll have no one to help him do it but the bartenders.

The police superintendent's suggestion yesterday before the House liquor investigation subcommittee that vertical drinking be legalized to make enforcement easier drew a crossfire of abuse from wets and drys, but only professional dispensers of drinks gave him any support.

Maj. Brown declared that when a man stands up to his drink it is easier for him or an impartial observer to see when he's had too much. Even temperance advocates who admitted the truth of this claim refused to condone publicly any change in the liquor law which would not decrease consumption.

The major's statement that "modern-day liquor conditions are worse than saloon days" met with unanimous approval, and a prominent wet blamed it on the lack of self-government in the District.

"Like a Colony"

"I don't believe that so long as the Federal Government has charge of appointments to the liquor control board and runs this District like a colony we're going to have decent conditions," said Capt. W. H. Stayton, executive director of the Repeal Associates.

"The Federal Government is not fitted to administer intimate laws of that sort," said Stayton. "Look at the mess they made of prohibition enforcement."

Edward B. Dunford, attorney for the Antisaloon League of America, agreed that things were better in the saloon days, but added, "There isn't any good way of selling liquor."

"You can control it when it's sold, but after it's bought you lose control," he said. The difference between standing up and sitting down to drink, he said, is "Tweedledum and Tweedledee."

Calls System "Silly"

Veteran bartenders, however, backed up Maj. Brown's claims from their own experience. After 36 years of mixing drinks for standees and sitters, George Miller prefers the standees, because he can "observe their condition of sobriety" more accurately.

People who sit down to a glass of beer are apt to pull a bottle of whisky from their pockets and get drunk at the proprietor's table, he said.

John J. Allen, of the Old Ebbitt Grill, 1427 F street northwest, a bartender of 56 years standing, pointed out that the standing system moves the customers more quickly. If people sit down, they stay there too long. Besides, he said, sitting down to drink is "silly."

Wilbur LaRoe, jr., thought stand-up bars would be "a very inadequate solution if it's any solution at all;" in fact, "a step in the wrong direction."

"D. C. Barbary Coast"

"What we need is not more bars but less places where liquor is sold," he said. "The District looks like the Barbary Coast."

Maj. Brown's other recommendations, to establish combination licenses that permit liquor to be sold in drug stores, and to prohibit all liquor drinking on Sunday, met with the approval of all except Capt. Stayton.

"The American people have voted that drinking is proper," he said, referring to the repeal of prohibition. "To say they shan't drink on Sunday is an impertinence."

Commissioner George Allen summed up the situation with the comment, "I don't want to see anything like the old saloon come back."

Vatican Told Of More Nazi Persecutions

53 in Polish House Where Killer Hid Reported Executed

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 7.—The Holy See has been receiving a copious amount of documentation on the persecution of Jews in German-occupied Poland, a source close to the papal secretariat of state revealed today. The following incidents were cited as being "characteristic."

One day in Warsaw, it was announced, a Jew had killed a Polish policeman and taken refuge in a house. The Nazi police went there and arrested the 53 inhabitants.

They were taken to the fortress of Warsaw and divided into three groups. The first group was ordered to dig their graves, and after they were executed the second group were forced to bury them and then dig their own graves. The third group, in turn, had to bury the second and then prepare their graves. Then the officers addressed them and announced that since they were the last survivors, they would have the honor of being interred by German soldiers—which was done immediately after their execution.

After that Jewish community leaders were summoned and told the 53 people were held as hostages and would be executed unless 300,000 zlotys were paid. The money was raised and turned over to the Nazis, whereupon it was announced that the 53 Jews had already been executed. The Nazi authorities added that every provocation would be paid for by the arrest of 1,000 Jews. In Lask, 100 Jews were shot for having opposed German soldiers who were searching their houses for arms. In Sieradz, 36 Jews who were accused of firing on German soldiers were executed. At Pabianice, nine Jewish men and one woman were shot for not having saluted the swastika flag. At Colo, 217 were whipped in public for having sought to satisfy their hunger by seizing food.

Maj. Brown Asks Sunday Closing

the old days," he said. "Many people now feel that 2 a. m. is not a late hour. People used to go to dances at 8 o'clock; now they go at 10."

Defending his recommendation that the sale of beer and wine on Sunday be halted, Maj. Brown said "it creates a bad impression" on persons who go to church.

Would Shut Stores at 9

The police superintendent suggested that package liquor stores might be closed at 9 o'clock except on Saturday night as they caused police concern over the danger of holdups.

He condemned combination merchandise and liquor stores on the ground that they tempted buyers.

Lieut. Earl P. Hartman, chief of the vice squad, defended the ABC Board police inspectors against charges that they are "rookies" and "overzealous" in the enforcement of the board's regulations.

Several Are Lawyers

The ages of the inspectors range from 24 to 30, he said, and several of them are graduate lawyers.

Hartman denied reports that there had been widespread sales of liquor to minors in Washington and stated that he had received only eight complaints of this sort since last October.

"It is hard to tell the age of many minors, particularly girls," he qualified.

Allies Ready To Buy Billion In U. S. Planes

Morgenthau Confers; China, Danes, Iceland Get $31,000,000 Loan

tened by the recent arrival of Sir Henry Self and Rene Pleven, aviation representatives of the British and French governments.

Morgenthau is the Administration liaison officer charged with coordinating Allied war purchases with domestic needs, both for National defense and commercial uses. The Allied agents are believed to have made known their wants at the conference yesterday, and to have arrived at some understanding with Morgenthau.

Negotiations concerning the purchase program have been at a standstill for some time pending an agreement on types of planes. Purvis declared the Allies knew exactly what they wanted and when they wanted it.

The Allies have already purchased upwards of 4,000 planes in the United States.

Asked about reports that delay in the purchases resulted from a plan to confine orders to three types of planes, Sir Henry told reporters that "talk of standardization" was premature.

The Morgenthau conference revived reports that warplanes on which the Army Air Corps has sole options might be released for sale to the Allied powers. Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said las month, however, that one of these—the Bell "Airacobra"—had not been released.

The other new plane in which the Allies have been particularly interested is the two-motor Lockheed pursuit ship credited with a top speed of 420 miles an hour in a transcontinental test flight.

Purvis emphasized that the Allies had no fixed idea with regard to types. The whole question of purchases, including the number of planes and types, he said, depends on what the American industry is able to furnish. There is no limit, he declared, on the number of companies from which purchases will be made.

Jones said Finnish purchases with funds provided by the Export-Import Bank included rye, lard, peas, cotton, tractors, wool, trucks, soy bean oil, telephone wire and soap.

He expects China to repay its loan in tin.

GOP Gains Arouse Senate Farm Bloc

Subcommittee for this morning to start voting on the measure. The bill will be rushed to completion over the week-end. Under an informal Senate agreement, the trade agreements bill will be called up in the Senate Monday, made the unfinished business, and immediately laid aside for the farm bill.

Farm bloc spokesmen advocated varying amounts for farm parity, surplus removal and tenancy appropriations, depending chiefly on sections represented.

One compromise set of figures put forward, but not yet agreed to, would provide:

For parity payments—$200,000,000, as against $225,000,000 provided last year, and no provision in the President's 1941 budget.

For farm surplus removal and financing the food stamp relief plan—$85,000,000, in addition to the $90,000,000 from customs receipts, as against a $113,000,000 appropriation last year.

For the Bankhead farm tenant program—$50,000,000, to be loaned by the RFC and thus not reflected in new appropriations, against $40,000,000 directly appropriated last year.

The House failed to provide any sum for parity payments, eliminated all but customs receipts for farm surplus removal, and defeated $25,000,000 for the farm tenant program.

Proposed Senate farm bill increases must run the gantlet of the economy-minded Senate Appropriations Committee before reaching the Senate floor. They are understood to have strong support in the subcommittee voting today. If upset in the full committee, increases will be proposed directly from the floor.

Parity payment amendments were expected to garner many Republican as well as Democratic votes in the Senate. Leading Republican candidates for the Presidency recently have included farm parity planks in farm area speeches. The successful Republican candidate for the House in Iowa's Sixth District Congressional elections Tuesday ran on a parity platform. Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney, speaking in Lincoln, Nebr., Wednesday, listed No. 1 in his farm platform: "Establish a fair parity between agricultural and industrial prices."

Developments on the campaign front:

Dispatches from Ohio said Postmaster General Farley had made telephone inquiries in Ohio's Fourteenth District as to prospects of electing a Farley-pledged delegate in Ohio's Presidential preference primaries.

Friends of Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, who supported President Roosevelt in the 1932 and 1936 elections, said he would take a "hands-off" attitude in the 1940 campaign.

In Pittsburgh, former Mayor William N. McNair, seeking Pennsylvania's Democratic Senatorial nomination, urged his supporters to "write in" the name of Secretary of State Hull on the State's Presidential preference ballots.

Huge Liner Wears Mine Cable

deck, the collars turned up on their jackets, but the seamen were less unbending. Some of them ran up and down, waving and peering upward at a single commercial airplane circling overhead.

Farther up the bay, a cluster of nondescript vessels offered an unofficial welcome and then Elizabeth dropped anchor at Quarantine for several hours before proceeding on to her dock.

One customs officer, two immigration officials and two officers of the Cunard-White Star Lines swung aboard from a Coast Guard cutter; all others were barred and there was a general air of secrecy all through the proceedings.

"Well," replied Capt. J. C. Townley, the Elizabeth's master—the hero of the strangest maiden voyage ever made by a merchant ship—"we're here."

Urged to tell what he had learned of the trip, Barlow announced that it was "just a normal crossing." But then, making a relative breach of restraint, he conceded:

"It was an excellent job, under the circumstances."

The Elizabeth had made the crossing from Greenock, Scotland—where she had halted briefly on a voyage that actually had begun from her fitting-out basin on the Clyde River—in 6 days.

Ten tugs were called into service to assist her into a berth in which the Elizabeth will be like money in a foreign bank to the British—alongside the next largest British liner, the 81-000-ton Queen Mary, and the 83-000-ton Normandie of the French Line.

The Queen Elizabeth would fill Times and Longacre squares, in New York City, from Forty-third street to Forty-seventh street. She is 7½ times heavier than the Eiffel Tower. She is about 170 feet longer than the R. C. A. Building in Rockefeller Center is high. Her top speed has not become officially known—since this was her first voyage and her interior still isn't completed—but maritime men figured it well above 30 knots.

How the Elizabeth was convoyed—if she was—remained one of many official secrets. So careful were the British that among those barred from going aboard the liner at quarantine was a United States officer of naval intelligence. Two hundred and fifty policemen guarded the pier in mid-Manhattan and all visitors were barred.

The ship herself showed no damage save for a broken window on a portside promenade deck. Eight davits were unoccupied, but it was explained that this was because all unnecessary lifeboats had been left at home.

The vessel's forward bridge, at the wings, was constructed with heavy steel armor and equipped with peepholer, presumably a precaution against submarines.

One of her sailors, asked if the crew had been afraid of submarines, shouted:

"No; they keep away from us!"

Her interior, according to Capt. Barlow, "looked like a completed ship," her paint and polish glistening.

The line itself, however, subsequently issued a statement, saying that interior accommodations were not "wholly complete," and adding, "No plans have been made for the vessel beyond tying her up at Pier 90 with the Queen Mary."

Driver Freed On $1,000 Bail In Auto Death

Clarence Thomas Is Given 180 Days, Released for Appeal

Clarence Lee Thomas, 38, of 907 M street northwest, was at liberty under $1,000 bail last night pending an appeal from a sentence of 180 days in jail pronounced yesterday for negligent homicide in the death of Mrs. Carrie Howard, 38, of the same address.

Police Judge Curran imposed sentence after overruling a motion for a new trial made by Defense Attorney Michael J. Lane. Thomas was convicted by a jury February 28.

Mrs. Howard died of injuries received in a three-car collision at Twelfth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast, October 7. Testimony revealed Thomas was driving Mrs. Howard to Gallinger Hospital to see her daughter when his automobile struck one operated by Raymond Holmes, colored, 33, of 1635 Kramer street northeast, and then careened into the car of Edward Schaefer, 1705 Bay street southeast.

Daladier Sees Welles Twice And Is Pleased

'Very Satisfactory,' Says French Premier; Conversation Secret

By P. J. Philip.

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, March 7.—Premier Daladier had two long interviews with Sumner Welles today, first at his office in the early evening for over two hours and later at dinner at the Quai D'Orsay when the French premier was supported by Undersecretary Champetier de Ribes and, among others, Georges Bonnet and heads of the French foreign service, Alexis Leger and Robert Coulondre. These interviews the French premier considered "very satisfactory."

Premier Daladier is understood to have presented France's problem from its moral and human point of view. To the usual German argument of national economic necessity he opposed that of human liberty and happiness.

Welles began his visit in Paris this morning with a press conference which was a model of the good-natured "hush-hush" variety. Over 100 American, French and British newspapermen were assembled in the library of the American Embassy to be told exactly nothing for a reason which the Undersecretary of State emphasized at once:

"My aim in visiting Italy, Germany, France and Great Britain," he said, "is solely to be able to give an account to the President of the present situation in Europe."

Welles, however, was as emphatically informative about what he is not doing:

"The President," he said, "has very clearly declared and I insist on it, that I have no proposals to make and no engagements to take in the name my government. I must add that all information which I have obtained and all statements which have been made to me by members of the governments whom I have met or whom I shall meet must be considered as wholly and strictly confidential and to be communicated only to the President of the United States.

"I cannot in consequence make any direct or indirect allusion to the information which has been given me or to the views which have been laid before me."

With a smile he added:

"Now I am entirely at your disposal."

A newspaperman asked: "What kind of questions would you reply to?" To which the reply was "I leave that to your judgment."

Another question was "Can you tell us whether during your voyage you have found any reason for encouragement?"

To that this second "Col. House" answered "I am leaving that to the appreciation of the President."

Welles was met on his arrival today by French Undersecretary Champetier de Ribes, American Charge d'Affaires Robert Murphy and other officers of the Embassy. On his day's program were a visit to President Lebrun at 4 o'clock and to Premier Daladier at 5, both of which visits lasted longer than the time allocated. In the evening Daladier gave an informal dinner at the Quai d'Orsay to his visitor.

At Dijon the train made an unscheduled stop to enable Ambassador Kennedy, who was on his way to London from Genoa, to join Welles. They spent an hour together, but before arrival in Paris Kennedy had rejoined his own train at Laroche.

Press Clings to War

The French press commented that France and Britain, if they failed to carry through the fight would be abandoning their duty not only for their own peoples, but for all Europe and the United States included.

"It would be a piece of cowardice which would open the whole world to the law of the jungle," Vladimir Dormesson says in an open letter addressed to "Dear Mr. Sumner Welles," in Figaro today.

The Paris Soir salutes Welles as a diplomat of strong character and penetrating views.

"In Germany you were the guest of an oligarchy," it says. "In Paris the whole people welcomes you. That is the crux of the whole situation—on one side the tyranny of a party, on the other a people that is free."

Kaiser's Kin Exempt From Internment

London, March 7 (AP).—Home Secretary Sir John Anderson told Commons today that Prince Frederick of Prussia, 28-year-old grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm, was granted exemption from interment.

Prince Frederick was in Britain when the war began. Many of his brothers are in German forces.

Arctic corridor of Finland which extends between Norway and Russia from Nautsi to the Arctic Ocean.

[If so, Russians would be in possession of the entire Petsamo district.]

The Finns, as usual, said nothing of their own losses, but indicated the need for replacements by calling to the colors the class of 1920—mostly youths of 19—and all men of other classes scheduled for reexamination this year or in succeeding years.

The official Finnish press bureau, meanwhile, issued a statement asserting that, according to information in the possession of the government, Russia was believed to be preparing—apparently as the price of peace—demands "even more far reaching" than those which preceded the outbreak of war last November 30.

"The detail of these demands, however, are so far lacking," the statement said.

(Reports from Stockholm said that Sweden is seeking to arrange an armistice in the Russian-Finnish war, and that Russian peace terms had recently been presented to Finland.)

East of Viipuri the Russians were reported to have suffered heavy losses in frontal attacks on Finnish positions yesterday, and the high command said that 17 tanks had been destroyed between Viipuri Bay and the Vuoski River. A Russian attack on Taipale at the eastern end of the Karelian Isthmus also was repulsed, the Finns said, despite heavy artillery preparation.

Military observers expressed belief that the Russian troops now at the southern outskirts of Viipuri would not attempt to occupy the city until the Finns had been driven back on the east and west.

These observers pointed out that should the Russians attempt to move into the city too hastily they might find themselves in a trap.

Meanwhile the Russians made new efforts to move across the frozen Gulf of Finland 60 miles west of Viipuri, launching attacks yesterday on Haapasaari Island and the Virolahti Archipelago.

The Finns said the attacks had been repulsed—as were similar assaults two days before. Haapasaari Island is about 18 miles from the port of Kotka on the south Finnish coast.

A Russian success on the northern shore of Lake Ladoga was acknowledged by the Finnish high command, which said the invaders had captured "a few" islands near Pitkaranta.

The Russian air force concentrated its activities yesterday on the vicinity of Viipuri Bay, but ranged as far along the south coast as Kotka, bombing that city and Virolahti. Vuokatti and Sotkamo in northern Finland also were reported bombed.

The Finns said they had shot down two of the raiders.

most vulnerable—would almost inevitably be protected against an allied attack.

Russia, once free from the war, would be able to cooperate in developing and sending her raw materials to Germany and at the same time could concentrate on watching Germany's Balkan flank, where some observers predict the Allies might some day try to attack the Nazis.

The Balkan countries, watching Finland collapse after the fate of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, would be inclined less and less to put their trust in the Allies who have been identified with Finland's cause.

There is also a fifth reason, though it is more remote. If Finland submitted, and Russia dominated that country, the Russo-German combination would then be in a position not only to meet its needs of raw materials from Scandinavia, but might force Norway to allow the Germans to use its air naval bases, from which attacks could be launched against Britain's navy in the North Sea.

Even this casual appraisal indicates the desperate alternatives which tonight face the Allies. There is no longer any doubt that Great Britain and France are prepared to send a great force to help the Finns, but the most direct and perhaps the only practical way of doing this would be through Norway and Sweden, and both of these countries, dreading a German attack from the south, refuse to allow organized troops to pass through to Finland.

The minister of one of the principal powers concerned, in discussing these vital questions tonight said: "The entire complexion of the main war probably will be changed by Finland's decision within the next two weeks, and the man who will make that decision is likely to be Field Marshal Mannerheim."

"The decision of the leader of the Finnish forces," the minister said, "probably will be dominated by whether or not he believes the Allies can beat Germany."

"If Marshal Mannerheim believes the Allies can win," he added, "Marshal Mannerheim is likely to fight on. If he is not sure, he may take what he can get in the way of peace."

Welles to See Chamberlain And Halifax

U. S. Not Getting Fat On World's Misery, Kennedy Tells Press

Copyright by New York Times

London, March 7.—Ambassador Kennedy came back to his post today and immediately drafted a London itinerary for Undersecretary of State Welles, who will fly here from Paris and remain until Thursday.

Welles will see Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and opposition leaders, and the Ambassador, in reply to a question, said the undersecretary probably would see King George "if he is asked."

Questioned by British reporters who wanted to know about the "war boom" in the United States, Kennedy said it was a mistake to think the U. S. A. was playing the part of Uncle Shylock and getting fat on the world's misery. This notion, said the ambassador, was "poppycock." The dislocation of trade and business, he said, was a very serious thing and he added that while some industries were making money, "there can be no general advantage from the war for the United States."

Asked if isolation sentiment was stronger than when he went to the United States in December, the ambassador said, "if you mean by isolation the desire to keep out of war, I should say it is definitely strong. I think it is stronger because people understand the war less and less as they go along."

Trying to explain this to the British reporters, who apparently did not favor it, the ambassador said the United States did not feel this way because it was callous or selfish, but because, like the British and French peoples in the months before the war, Americans simply dread the idea of getting caught up in the conflict.

"They all say, 'we don't want to fight.' It is the same everywhere you go. I noticed it in Spain, Portugal and Italy on my way here."

holder. He never mentioned American women through it all, though someone said there was enough of politics and something romantic might be talked about. His mind was on the federation.

He came to America to study democracy, he insisted, and what he learned might be applied to the federation, which would be a protective set-up of the little countries along the Danube. All of it appeared very much dependent upon an Allied victory.

His eyes lighted, his talk flashed, when the President was mentioned. He likes the President. "His efforts for peace were magnificent, just before the war began."

With him is his tall 23-year-old brother, Archduke Felix. His way of talking is less accented, but deeply purposeful. He entered little in the interview, sitting to the right of his brother, puffing a cigarette.

Finns Reported Against Red Terms

mental and spectacular offensive across the ice west of that city, it is held possible here that Moscow is trying a simultaneous and equally experimental game on the chessboard of diplomacy.

Whether the Soviet "demands" will prove acceptable or not, the important thing is first that some sort of communication has been reestablished which may develop into a resumption of negotiations, and, secondly, whatever the new demands, the Moscow demarche seems to imply Josef Stalin's recognition of the fact that there is a Helsinki government after all, which in turn seems to be somewhat of a letdown for Kuusinen and his puppet "People's" government in Terijoki.

The Finnish press has, during the last ten days, amply printed foreign peace rumors.

The reaction commonly has been, and still is, that Finland and the Finnish army are anxious only for an "honorable peace," generally accepted to mean a status quo with such concessions as were made in October and again in November, on the eve of the outbreak of hostilities; and it still remains true that, judging from the factors so far available to observers here, the Finns will definitely not negotiate any sort of peace jeopardizing the very principles of their national independence for which they went to war. Their steadily lengthening casualty lists are only making the Finns still more firmly resolved to resist, and it is doubted by any one knowing the Finns that even a great military reverse could make any difference in their decision to play the game to the very end, rather than to submit to defeat and indignity.

The Finns hope for peace, it is true, but it must be remembered that before they hope for peace they hope for some of that foreign aid which they were lavishly promised before, during and after the Geneva conference last December. The opinion of the average Finn seems to be now that England and France would help them, but that the Swedes and the Norwegians do not dare to let that help pass in quantities sufficient that it would be of decisive value.

Stockholm Seat of Parley

Copenhagen, March 7 (AP).—Closely guarded negotiations toward an armistice and possible settlement of the Russian-Finnish war are definitely under way and Stockholm is the center of discussions, it was learned reliably tonight.

The Soviet government's conditional demands for peace, in the form of an ultimatum calling for acceptance by midnight tomorrow, have been submitted to the Finnish government which thus far has not given any indication of its attitude, informants stated.

(Informed Moscow observers discounted the possibility of success for any peace moves at this time.)

The latest Russian demands were reported to include the surrender of the Karelian Isthmus, Viipuri, capital of Karelia and Finland's second city; Lake Ladoga; Hango, naval port in southeastern Finland; the Hango Peninsula and part of the far northern Petsamo region.

These demands are far more inclusive than those presented by Russia in Kremlin negotiations which broke down and preceded the Red army's invasion of Finland on November 30.

Viipuri Added Claim

In the prewar negotiations the Russians asked for cession of a strip of territory north of Leningrad on the Karelian Isthmus in exchange for a part of Soviet Karelia; naval bases on Finland's southern coast; some concessions on the Arctic coast and demilitarization of the Finnish Russian border. Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff specified then that Russia was not asking for Viipuri, now objective of the main Russian offensive.

That Russia had hiked her demand was confirmed in part by the Finnish official press bureau in Helsinki, which issued this statement:

"According to information in possession of the Finnish government the Soviet government is believed to have planned presentation of demands to Finland more far reaching in character than those presented last autumn. Details of these demands, however, are so far lacking."

French Claim Navy Has Sunk 12 U-Boats

18,000 Tons of Nazi Shipping Seized, Minister Reports

Paris, March 7 (AP).—The French navy has sunk 12 German submarines, captured 1",000 tons of German shipping and with the British navy has broken the back of Germany's threat to block the sea lanes, Navy Minister Cesar Campinchi declared today.

(British sources have reported that the two Allied navies have destroyed a total of about 50 submarines.)

In a survey of the first six months of the war Campinchi asserted that "the Allied naval supremacy is better than ever and Germany's main fleet does not move much nor far from its bases."

Campinchi said:

"The French sailor has given blow for blow to the Germans. For each cargo boat lost by us our sea and air patrols have almost matched that rate with a German submarine. The Simoun has just brought to a dozen the number of Nazi submarines lost."

The Simoun, 1,319-ton destroyer, already had been credited February 27 with sinking a submarine off the Spanish coast.

France's commercial fleet has shrunk less than 2 per cent through German action, the total loss being 15 ships of 71,511 tons, but no French warships have been destroyed, Campinchi said.

Besides new shipping and German prizes put into service, France yesterday floated a new warship, the 35,000-ton battleship Jean Bart, the minister announced.

King Carol Puts Entire Nation Behind Army

Bucharest, March 7 (AP).—Military sources reported tonight that a new Rumanian call to arms was imminent after King Carol, speaking to his Parliament and people, had declared the nation's whole resources would be thrown behind the army as a "supreme guarantee of our independence and the integrity of our borders."

A peacetime record army of 1,600,000 men is already under arms, but informed military sources expected King Carol would call up additional thousands of reservists soon to reinforce the watch along Rumania's World War won borders.

"Sacrifices" Asked

The King revealed taxes would be increased to meet additional military expenses.

"I am sure my people will accept such sacrifices," he said, "for the sake of the country and peace."

Strict neutrality will be maintained even in the fields of foreign commerce, he said, "in order to assure the essential flow of supplies to our army and our people."

King Carol's declaration was made at a time when the tug-of-war between Germany and the Allies for Rumania's raw materials was viewed by diplomats as forcing Bucharest close to the necessity of choosing sides.

Reich Presses Bucharest

The King declared Rumania's relations with other nations were good, but he mentioned specifically only Italy and Bulgaria.

Viroel Tilea, Rumanian Minister to London, now is on his way home to present a British proposal that Britain be accorded equal treatment with Germany on Rumanian exports, particularly oil. On the other side Germany is pressing Rumania for the 1,600,000 tons of oil for which she contracted during 1940 and for all this year's wool crop.

Rumanians fear that if Germany finds herself unable to get the oil she wants she will be tempted to come to Rumania to organize traffic for herself.

Commons Told Britain's Air Force Better, Grows Faster Than Reich's

By the Associated Press

London, March 7.—A secret appropriation to expand the royal air force, which Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood declared is better and growing faster than Germany's, was approved without a record vote by the House of Commons tonight.

The action came after Sir Kingsley assured the members that he and Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, were fighting Germany, not each other, and thus apparently quieted an incipient row over agitation for giving coastal units of the air force into navy control.

The air minister was aided in his efforts to keep the R. A. F. under his unified direction by a day of new exploits in driving off German air raiders and scouting German cities, and by British-French reports which boasted of growing air strength and naval supremacy.

Commons approved the token estimate of 100 pounds—the actual amount not to be published until after the war—for the air force after Sir Kingsley had declared, in answer to pleas to turn over coastal defense planes to the navy, that "the admiralty is making no such suggestions."

"The admiralty and R. A. F. have been endeavoring to conduct this war not by fighting one another but by fighting the enemy," he added.

"I think I can say for Churchill that he doesn't, nor do I, want to be involved in a controversy of this kind."

Sir Kingsley told the House of Commons that British-French aircraft production now was ahead of Germany's both in quality and quantity.

He gave the House a highlight survey of the Royal Air Force, and said the production of Spitfires and Hurricanes, Britain's No. 1 and No. 2 fighter planes, had been doubled since the outbreak of war, and that the output of the bigger and heavier bomber types had been increased by 50 per cent.

Of quantity, Sir Kingsley expressed confidence "that even on a numerical basis the output of aircraft now accruing to us and to France today is in excess of that of Germany."

Of quality, he said that "I would sooner have 100 Wellingtons (a bomber type), or 100 Spitfires or Hurricanes, than a much larger number of their German counterparts."

In surveying Royal Air Force activities he said British airmen had carried out more than 1,000 sorties into German territory by day and night, and had brought down 44 German aircraft near the British coast "without a single loss on our side," in addition to which others were forced down at sea or on neutral territory.

Methodists Back Objectors to War

Philadelphia, March 7 (AP).—A Methodist Church social service commission today indorsed the action of the uniting council in "claiming exemption from military service for members of our church who are conscientious objectors" to war.

A commission report, submitted at the opening of the 153rd Philadelphia annual Methodist conference, appealed for ending the present European war "without a decisive military victory on either side and the creation, by unenforced negotiation, of a just and lasting peace."

Italian Anger Against British On Increase

6 More Coal Ships Destined for Italy Held at the Downs

By Herbert L. Matthews.
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 7.—Italian circles today showed extreme resentment over the seizure of their colliers and the confiscation of the cargoes by Great Britain. The conciliatory atmosphere has faded away and it seems fairly certain that the Italian government is preparing to take a strong line. However, nothing can be done until the British reply is received to the protest note delivered last Sunday. The delay in making the answer, incidentally, is an additional reason for the mounting irritation being felt here.

[An Associated Press dispatch from London said six more Italian coal ships were held at the contraband control station at the Downs yesterday.

[The cargoes of eight others, totaling about 100,000 tons, were ordered unloaded Wednesday. Another was released because it sailed March 1, before the blockade deadline.

[The six ships escorted to the Downs Wednesday night were the Puzzuoli, Ischia, Integritas, Pamia, San Luigi and Semien.]

Measure Considered Unjustified

A semiofficial source reflects the stern attitude now being taken. It starts out by saying the official stand is one of strict reserve, since Italy both de jure and de facto is in a state of expectation—de jure, because it is up to the British to answer the Italian note, and de facto, because Italy is awaiting Great Britain's official decision on the seized cargoes.

"However," the statement continues, "the situation is provoking strong resentment in Italian public opinion, which considers the British measures unjustified whether on the ground of legality or equity."

The refusal of the Fascist government to furnish war material to Britain, continues the statement, is "fully justified by the position of Italy as the only great nonbelligerent European power . . . for Italy this is not simply a question of prestige but of her own interests, which she is determined to defend as her position demands, for if the Mediterranean is a route for other powers it is life itself for Italy.

Strongest Statement So Far

This is the strongest statement that has been issued since the coal conflict started, and it does not stand alone, for the newspapers are at last being permitted to let off a little of the steam which has been generating all week. The feeling is expressed mostly in the headlines. The Stampa, for instance, refers to "British Blackmail," and the Gazetta Del Popolo to "The Illegal Seizure." But commentators are getting their chance, too. Giovanni Ansaldo mentions the controversy for the the first time today, in the Leghorn Telegrafo. He offers it as proof that the British are nervous and exasperated and were rushed into acting too hastily.

Manton Begins Bribery Sentence

jurist presented himself in New York earlier today.

Lowenthal took the once austere jurist to the office of Col. Guy C. Rexroad, acting warden, to begin the routine that all convicts must experience — fingerprints, photographs, a bath, a coarse uniform.

Manton will spend the required 30 days in a quarantine ward and then will be assigned a job—probably as a clerk in the penitentiary office.

Tears moistened the former judge's eyes but his face was twisted in his customary scowl as he entered Marshal Lowenthal's office to begin the 200-mile journey here. Eighteen minutes later—at 9:45 a. m.—he was on his way to pay the penalty for favoring persons with cases before his court.

At Allentown, Pa., Manton ducked in the car seat to shield his face from prying eyes. Four hours later he was in prison, completely stripped of the dignity of 23 years on the Federal bench; clad in prison gray instead of the velvet-collared blue overcoat and expensive business suit he wore on the motor trip.

As a prisoner here, the once-respected arbiter of the law joins men like many of those on whom he passed judgment before his downfall. He was convicted last June 3. Last week the United States Supreme Court refused to review the conviction and sentence.

"EILEEN MACHREE." Her name is really Eileen George and she's the completely cute new singer you'll see at the Anchor Room next Monday. Eileen's from Baltimore, has just finished a straight 14-month engagement at Doc's, one of the most popular spots over there.

NEWSGATHERING EVENING. 10:30. At the Mayfair and those new Rhythm Boys are raising the echoes with a terrific number called "Natasha" and hilarious parodies on "Bahama Mamma" and "Week-end of a Private Secretary." The R. Boys are all goodlooking, are togged out in powder blue coats and only one of them is married. . . . Publicist Bill Mullett comes over to tell us that a Hawaiian dancer from Texas hight Marianne Cude will star in the Shoreham Blue Room next week. We suggest that a Texan Hawaiian dancer ought to wear an alfalfa skirt. Bill says that sounds good but you never can tell when Max Lowe will bring a pony act into the Blue Room. . . . Our most undependable operative tells us that Bamboo Gardens will reopen next Tuesday. (Since then we've been telephoned by Bamboo's Manager Huey Liang, found out that Bamboo will reopen next Tuesday as the Casino Royal with a smart band led by Eddy Wald and a Broadway floor show. The best of luck, Huey Liang.

Midnight. At the Troika ringside. And there's the startlingly beautiful Luba Malina. She tells us about the songs and gowns she's probably strutting as we write this column. We know you'll love her version of "Most Gentlemen Don't Like Love." And those fancy jiggers she wore over her head last night are called bashliks. . . . Eileen George (see paragraph 2) does some volunteer warbling, runs emcee Lee Kerry right off the floor with her pointed ad lib references to him in "Oh, Johnny." Walter Sweeney of the National Theater hears that Eileen's name is always being changed to "Gladys" by new acquaintances, says we should run a gag about it in connection with Gladys George's forthcoming National appearance. But we can't think of a gag. . . . Here comes Singer Maxine Tappan with six escorts. So the Mayflower Lounge must be closed for the night. Walter S. gets an autograph complex, has Maxine autograph a napkin. We oughta go home, but undependable operative won't stir. . . . Finally get out. The waiter has his hat and coat on, but he's still looking under the table for that missing napkin.

BABY SONG WRITERS. Joel Marston, 17-year-old Central High Schooler, and Cordia V. Lane, secretary in the B'nai B'rith office, are our town's newest song writers. Their joint products, "Poor Fool" and "Depending on the Stars," will soon be played in Shar-Zad by Bill McCune's orchestra.

NICE NEWS. Bob McLaughlin, who's been at O'Donnell's for the last eight years, will manage the new O'Donnell's Sea Grill when it opens in a couple of days, just as the plumbers and electricians wind up. . . . Manager Dick Butler of Hotel 2400 Sixteenth street writes us that there'll be no minimum or cover at the Lounge Riviera after this except on Saturdays after 9:30. . . . Those exceptionally graceful dancers you'll probably see in the Metronome Room this evening will probably be members of the Washington National Ballet who are giving a performance in Wardman's Little Theater earlier in the eve. . . . Hi Hat's Angie Rodante is looking like a peppermint stick in a new evening gown of red and white stripes. . . . Madrillon's No. 3 baby of the last month has just arrived. But he's Baby No. 1 to Papa Leon Ferber of the Madrillon orchestra. . . . There's a fine quartet down at the Nightingale. It includes Bill Downer, Joe Moser, Don Gordon and Clinton Hobbs.

DRUM MAJORETTES are one of the pepperiest items of the peppery Lotus show. With waving plumes, batons and ankles, the chorus pretties go to town with a bang. Other bright acts include Ashton and Carol in dance satires, Monsieur Duval who juggles plates, trays, knives, forks, eggs, frying pans and oranges. The Lotus chef had better keep a sharp eye on his kitchen equipment while M. Duval is around.

RIVER BEND will go berserk again tonight with "Swing Night." George Stein and his boys have more rhythms than Ringling has elephants. Which leads up to saying that "Swing Night" is always a circus.

FINE FIDDLERS. Leader Bert Bernath, of the Pall Mall Room, should treat the customers to more violin solos. He can take you out of the world in any number you can name . . . . Violinist Durward Bowersox, of the Rainbow Rooms, gives that inimitable thrill to dance music. We don't know whether it's Durward or his $5,000 Guernarius . . . Arsenio Ralon, of La Salle Versailles, plays entirely delightful interludes. He's of symphony caliber.

SPECIAL DELIVERY. To Canary Lynne Allison of the Robin Hood. Where, oh where, is that picture you were going to bring around?

Uncle Tom's Cabin Loses Beer Permit

The Prince Georges County Board of License Commissioners yesterday revoked the beer license of Thomas R. Brogan, owner of Uncle Tom's Cabin, near Whiteley's Subdivision, following complaints from a civic delegation.

More than 20 persons appeared before the board at Upper Marlboro, complaining against "disturbances and loud noises" at the establishment.

Synagogue Dedicates Rites to Youth Group

Sabbath services tonight at the B'nai Israel Synagogue, Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest, will be dedicated to the Capital City chapter of A. Z. A., youth organization. Rabbi Henry Segal will speak on "Getting Out of Our Youth the Best That Is in Them."

Ernest Kipnis, Lou Weiner, Irving Van Grack and Bernie Phillips, members of A. Z. A., will take part in a debate during the open forum hour.

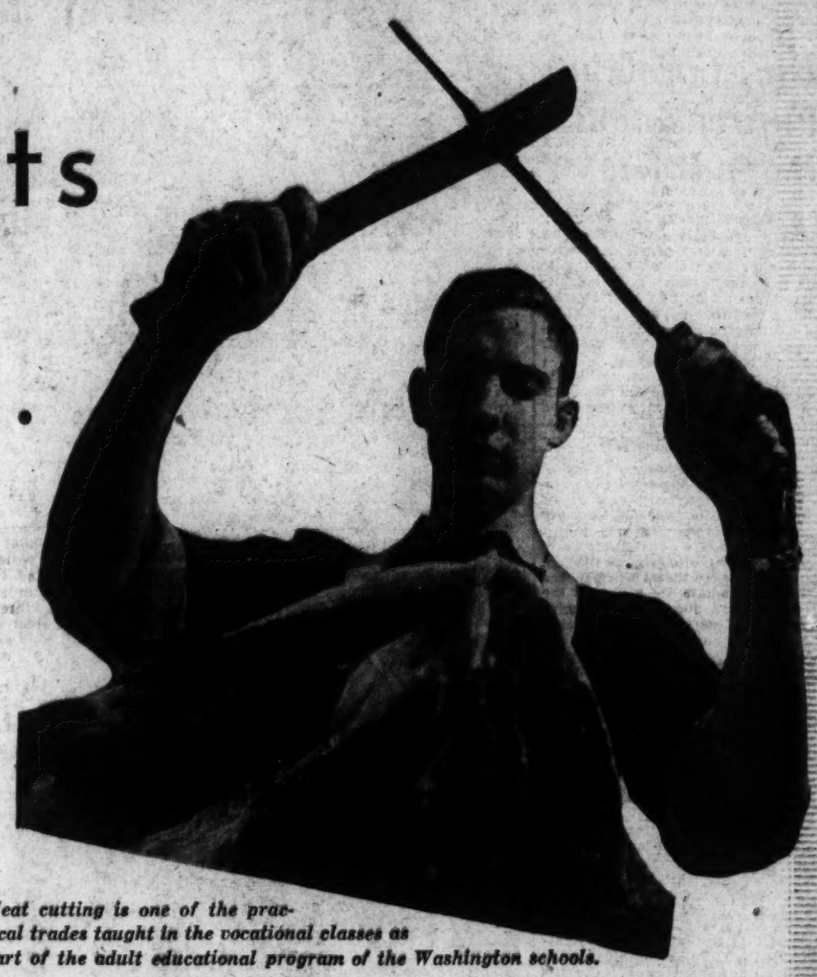
How Washington Schools train Adults for Jobs . . .



Meat cutting is one of the practical trades taught in the vocational classes as part of the adult educational program of the Washington schools.

HOW TO GET A JOB. How to get the experience you need in order to get a job. Those are twin themes in the Sunday Post's picture story of adult education in Washington.

The Post's eight pages of pictures in the "Our Town in Pictures" section show you what Washington schools are doing to prepare Washington youths—and men and women—for work. Beauty culture, welding, office work, barbering, meat cutting—Washington's school system offers courses as practical as these for anyone who wants the training. There are other courses for adults, too. Not all adult education is vocational, by any means. There are night classes for adults in which such subjects as trigonometry and English are studied. Washington's schools believe you are never too old to learn!

In addition to giving the picture story of adult education, this Sunday Post picture section shows Washington's Americanization work and how children with physical handicaps are aided. Are you interested in seeing what other people are doing? Then get the Sunday Post!

Children with Physical Handicaps Helped by Special Classes

A new light is brought into the world of the physically handicapped child through the work of Washington's special schools and special classes.

Children with poor vision, children who are partially or entirely deaf, crippled children—each of them presents a special problem which the Washington schools try to solve. Have you ever wondered how a deaf child is taught? Or how a child with very low vision can study and still preserve what sight remains?

No wonder The Washington Post's "Our Town in Pictures" section has been so enthusiastically received! Each section contains approximately a hundred pictures, of interest to all Washingtonians. It would take a 32-page standard-size magazine to give you all the pictures that are in just ONE of the 8-page Post sections. And remember, there are NINE OTHER SECTIONS in the BIG Sunday Post!

Commission Government Praised, Reviled

Opponents of Local Vote Have Round At House Hearing

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

The District Commissioners were highly praised and loudly denounced yesterday as opponents of local suffrage had a round before the House subcommittee on District reorganization.

Spokesmen for the Board of Trade and other business interests commended the District heads as able, efficient, and honest and expressed themselves, with one exception, as thoroughly satisfied with the present commission form of government.

The hearing ended in an uproar, however, when a resident of Northeast Washington complained that his section of the city has been neglected and topped it off with the comment that Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen is "too old" and that George E. Allen is "a disturbing element."

Nichols Tells of Threat

The local suffrage controversy was carried onto the House floor later in the day when Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, charged that "a newspaper owner" had threatened to "send someone into my district" to defeat him if he didn't change his attitude on the question.

Complining of "an unfair attack" by Frank Waldrop, columnist in the Times-Herald, Nichols said that a newspaper publisher had "sent word that if I didn't change my attitude someone would be sent into my district against me."

Nichols said that this threat didn't scare him in the least and that he would reveal the name of the newspaper owner later if his statement were challenged.

Nichols denied that he had raised the racial issue since the suffrage question had been before the subcommittee of which he is a member and asserted that he did not "have a string of relatives on the District pay roll" as charged.

"The real truth of the matter is that I haven't a single relative in any degree removed on the District pay roll," he said.

He explained that his sister, Mrs. Chloe B. Spencer, is employed by the District WPA and that he was "very proud" of her work. Four years ago, he added, he had recommended "a boy" for a District job, the youth was put to work, and is still there.

"Never since that time has any man, woman or child been employed by the District government on my recommendation," he declared.

Calls for Dogcatchers

W. H. Lowder, of 1533 Rosedale street northeast, brought the reorganization hearing to an explosive conclusion when he said that while some of the previous witnesses had no trouble getting service from the District Building, he did.

The Northeast is neglected in many particulars, he said, but the shortage of dogcatchers is one of the most serious ills. Dogs freeze to death, and lie about the streets injured, he asserted, because Washington has only one dog wagon.

"Yet every official in the District government has an automobile," he added.

Asking for a city manager, mayor, or governor, Lowder complained that Hazen had outlived his usefulness as a District official.

"He did fine until three years ago," Lowder continued, "but Commissioner Allen, he is the disturbing element. Everytime he gets mad he resigns. Then the President slaps him on the back."

Lowder said he was opposed to local suffrage and believed that the citizens associations aren't aggressive enough.

Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, was the most outspoken witness in opposition to suffrage.

Asserting that suffrage proponents want the vote "with strings on it," Lusk said:

"It would be just another barnacle to hitch on the District that would accomplish nothing and cause a lot of trouble."

Addressing Representative George Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, the only member of the subcommittee present, Lusk said:

"You would do a good job if you let suffrage be voted down—as I'm sure it would be—in the House and put an end to this hue and cry."

Lusk said he favored the replacement of the District Commissioners by an appointed city council of seven or nine members with a city manager in charge of all municipal agencies, including the schools and libraries.

Lusk said he wished to see the Budget Bureau control over District finances retained as the Federal agency is "the taxpayers' friend."

Lusk Called Unfair

Lusk's testimony brought a prompt reaction from Prof. Charles Thomas, colored civic leader, who said he had served on several committees with him.

"He always has the same story: cut down expenses," he said. "His testimony is unfair and ought to be discredited."

Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, president of the Forest Hill Citizens Association, testified that the organization she represented is opposed to any form of suffrage but that she favored it with limitations.

Lavish praise of the District Commissioners and the present form of government was voiced by a delegation of businessmen who came and left the hearing in a body.

James E. Colloflower, vice president of the Board of Trade, said that the Commissioners "are able, honest and efficient."

Edward P. Colladay, Republican national committeeman, sent a letter, which was read by Acting Chairman Bates, stating that he considered the Commissioners excellent administrators.

Finds Them Responsive

Arthur Sundlun, president of the Merchants & Manufacturers Association, testified that the Commissioners are "very responsive" and that the District has one of the best forms of government suitable to the National Capital.

Gen. Albert L. Cox, an attorney, and Edgar Morris, a business man, spoke highly of the Commissioners and the operation of the government. Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Community Chest, spoke of the cooperation between the Welfare Board and private charitable agencies.

Thomas P. Morgan, vice president of the Community Chest, said that while the District government is not perfect it had done as good a job as possible with limited funds. His father, who served as an elective alderman of the city in 1861, had considered the present form of government superior to that of the days of suffrage, Morgan said.

He complained that newspapers had referred to the Union Station traffic lights as a $50,000 Christmas tree" when actually the lights cost less than $4,000.

Child Welfare Group to Act On Bill Monday

Protective Services Would Be Provided By Legislation

The legislative committee of the child welfare division, Council of Social Agencies, will act Monday on a bill to broaden the powers of the Board of Public Welfare.

This legislation would permit the board to give protective services to children in their own homes and to accept dependent children for care away from home without court commitment. A casework service for unmarried mothers and their babies would be included.

The legislative committee of the division has already approved the drafts of two other pieces of child welfare legislation, which were spotlighted in the recent series in The Post on child placements in the District.

All three pieces will be considered at the next meeting of the council's child welfare division which will probably be called later next week, Mrs. Olive W. Swinney, secretary of the division, said yesterday.

A group from the child welfare division met yesterday, but discussion of these three pieces of legislation was deferred until the full meeting of the division.

Sirkis Slaying Trail Leads to Baltimore

Investigation of the holdup slaying of Herman Sirkis, 42-year-old liquor store proprietor, led police yesterday to an unsuccessful expedition to Baltimore.

Jeremiah Flaherty, homicide squad sergeant, took Calvin Pendleton, colored witness to the Sirkis murder, to Baltimore to view a score of colored robbery suspects, who were believed to be implicated in Washington robberies.

On the return of the detective and witness, George Darnell, chief of the homicide squad, said the slayers had not been found.

Cows Still Called Cows, Court Is Told

Producer, However, Is Defined as Man Who Does Milking

An all-day hearing on constitutionality of the Washington milk marketing agreement drew out in the District Court yesterday the happy information that a cow is still a cow.

Responding to an inquiry from Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, counsel offered assurance that Government agencies which have evolved many a long-tailed word to describe familiar things have—so far—left Bossy undisturbed.

The chief justice is hearing the suit of Holbrook Farms Dairy for an injunction to restrain enforcement of the marketing agreement. He asked numerous questions of counsel for both sides about their contentions and frequently required them to clarify technical terms.

Producer Does Milking

"What is a 'producer?'" he asked when that expression was introduced.

"A producer, your honor, is a farmer, the man who milks the cow," replied Sefton Darr, of counsel for the dairy.

"I see," said the chief justice, "and is there any new name being used for the cow?"

Darr replied that "the Government has not yet devised one."

Darr contended that the agreement ought not to apply to the Holbrook concern because its business was done entirely in Maryland and did not constitute interstate commerce, hence the Secretary of Agriculture had no authority to regulate it. Enforcement of the act would be an unconstitutional seizure of the Holbrook dairy's property, Darr said, because the firm would find it "ruinous" to increase its price to farmers as the agreement would require.

Darr to Close Today

Edward Knuff, special assistant to the Attorney General, told the court that the Holbrook firm had no right to ask the court for relief until it has exhausted its administrative remedies, by presenting its protest to the Secretary of Agriculture. Knuff argued that if the Holbrook dairy was not actually engaged in interstate commerce, its business was "in the current" of interstate commerce.

Darr will make his closing argument today. Chief Justice Wheat is expected to take the case under advisement.

Even Fires Come To Him Who Waits, Firemen Find

For the second time this week firemen at No. 8 Engine Company yesterday credited themselves with "services rendered" without moving from their quarters.

Tuesday, William F. Hager, of Seat Pleasant, Md., took the mountain to Mohammed when he drove his blazing automobile to the fire station in the 600 block North Carolina avenue southeast. Fire in the upholstery was quickly extinguished.

Another frenzied motorist interrupted the pinochle game yesterday. The upholstery of his machine also was afire and the blaze received the same treatment—a shot from an extinguisher.

Yesterday's fire bringer identified himself as James B. O'Connor, 138 Carroll street southeast.

William Shaw, Jeweler, to Be Buried Tomorrow

Funeral services for William Charles Shaw, 78, prominent in the jewelry business here for more than 45 years, will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow at St. Alban's Episcopal Church, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery. He died yesterday at Waverly Sanitarium after a long illness.

Mr. Shaw was born in Canada and came to Washington as a child. Active in the jewelry business most of his life, he was for many years president of Shaw & Brown Co. until his retirement three years ago. His home was at 2619 Woodley place northwest. His wife, Mrs. May Marvin Shaw, died in 1932.

Surviving are four children, Mrs. Morris Avery, of New York City, and Mrs. Lucien Hall Vandoren, John Francis Shaw and William Charles Shaw, jr., all of Washington.

Washington Industries—

By Edward F. Ryan

Washington is a white collar town and it shows in the laundry bill.

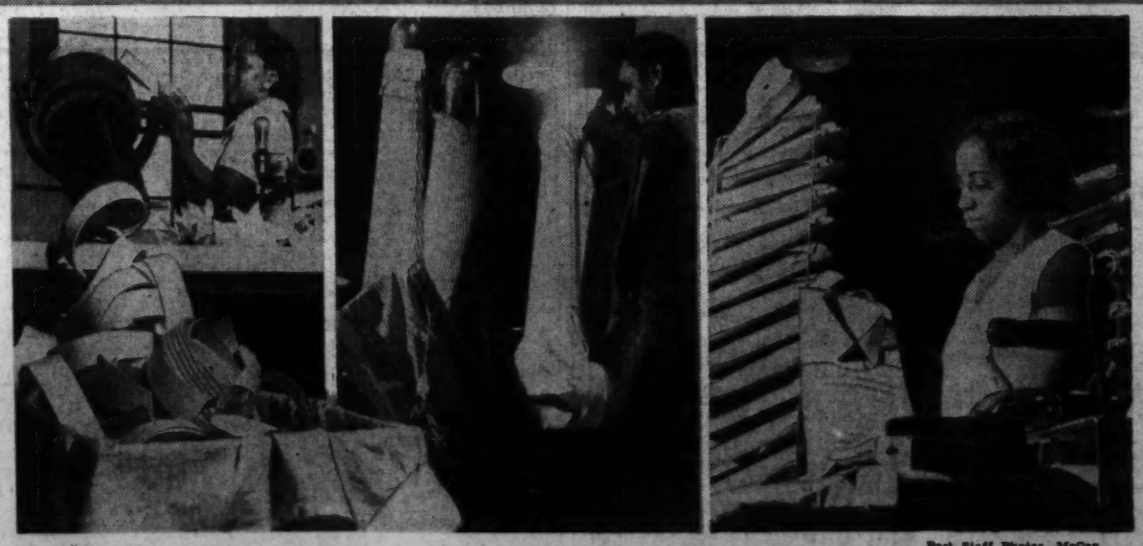
For the upkeep of its wardrobe, the city's working and resting population pays $10,000,000 a year and about $7,000,000 of that goes for laundry.

The daily demand for collars bleached and pointed, for occasional fresh sheets and towels and other necessary equipment, has fostered, in a city of busy workers and cramped apartment dwellers, a vast sprawling industry with outposts in every block.

Typical unit in this industry, in point of revenue, is the "power" laundry, although Washington has six times as many hand laundries. The hand laundries capture about $500,000 of the yearly trade, and to the 29 hand laundries listed in the 1935 industrial census goes nearly all the rest. A tiny smattering of the washing finds its way into dry cleaning establishments.

Origins of the industry are hidden in the rusting remains of ancient wash tubs. Old-timers in the business speak of the old days as anything but good.

Then, it is admitted, the white collar, along with shirts and sheets, made up the bulk of the laundry bundle. But the typical bundle was a 50-cent job, and old-timers like these days better. Now the white collar, alone and unattached, is a small fraction of the picture. Nearly all the collars are anchored to shirts, and a good half of the ones that go into the laundry bag are colored, but laundry operators find more reason for pride in the way they treat the bundles, more comfort in their average size, which has mounted to $1.75.



Fifty Collars Are Ironed Before You Could Put One On — Two upright steam-filled metal forms take wrinkles out of sleeves — Here's Your Package, Sir. But, Don't Forget The Bill!

Post Staff Photos—McCoy.

Your Laundry, Sir!

In the early days of this century, the laundry business was a "back alley" affair, according to one description. Machines were coming into general use, but the buildings they were in, and the uses they were put to, are mentioned in these times with scorn.

With all its use of the machine, the typical large-scale laundry still goes to work on soiled and wrinkled clothes with the same simple ingredients used by the energetic housewife—soap, water and plenty of hard work.

Trucks, whose drivers work their routes on commission, gather in the laundry bundles from all sections of the city. The bundles are weighed, tagged with a set of brass identification pins, and sent to the sorting room in 40 bundle lots. Skilled sorters break open each bundle, list each piece with a typewriter-like machine, mark them with indelible ink visible only in infra-red light, and separate them into three groups—white clothes, colored, and "fugitives" whose colors run.

In the net bags, the laundry is sent to the "wheels," the huge, power-driven washing machines. A battery of wheels spin constantly, turning over 20 times a minute, stopping only to receive a new batch of laundry. Once in the wheels, the laundry is thrown over and over, through several changes of suds, a half a dozen rinses, without coming up for air. Mechanical controls regulate the intake of suds and outflow and rinsing water, according to careful formula. The formula for shirts calls for four sudsings and six rinses, in 43 minutes.

After these baths, the laundry is transferred to driers—large sieve-like cylinders, which spin at 600 revolutions a minute, and force out all but a few traces of dampness.

Afterward the laundry has a straight run through various kinds of irons and presses. Flat work presses iron a sheet a minute, towels go to "fluff driers," socks go dried on steam-filled metal forms, while shirts go through a battery of six machines and under a hand iron.

With the ironing the job is nearly finished. By the ink markings, which stand out brightly in infra-red light, the original bundle is reassembled, packaged and sent, with the bill, to delivery trucks.

Texts of Majority and Minority Recommendations on Labor Act

2 in Inquiry Say Proposals Menace Labor

Amendments Seen As Leaving Worker 'At Mercy of Thugs'

The statement of views of the minority of the Smith investigating committee follow in part:

Believing that the welfare of labor is essential to a sound economy, throughout our service in Congress we have consistently and steadfastly supported labor legislation. We feel that the National Labor Relations Act is the most important of all labor legislation ever enacted by the Congress of the United States. In fact, it is the emancipation of labor and its Magna Carta . . .

But we believe that the proposed amendments, agreed upon by the majority of the committee, are in fact emasculatory and threaten the principles, purposes and objective of the act.

Envision Labor 'At Mercy of Thugs'

The first amendment deletes the following language in section 1: "The denial by employers of the right of employes to organize and the refusal by employers to accept the procedure of collective bargaining." We could not agree to this amendment because this language has been referred to by the Supreme Court as significant in determining the constitutionality of the act.

The next amendment constitutes a redefining of the term "employe." The particular language that we cannot agree to places the peaceful picket at the mercy of the labor spy, provocateur and hired thug. Any willful violence, regardless of its pettiness or provocation, would result in a denial of reinstatement to the employe—a sentence to economic death . . .

The purpose of the next amendment is the separation of quasi-judicial functions from administrative functions. This is attempted to be accomplished by the creation of an administrator, at a salary of $10,000 a year, empowered to carry out all administrative functions; leaving the board only judicial functions—or, in other words, setting the board up as a labor court but denying its orders the fundamental and necessary attributes inherent in court orders; namely, the sanctions necessary to properly effectuate such orders. We direct attention also to the fact that there is absolutely no remedy by appeal, to the board or otherwise, from an arbitrary or capricious refusal of the administrator to proceed with a charge made in good faith . . .

We disagree with a proposed definition of the term "collective bargaining" so drastically restrictive as to undermine the very foundation of the act by specifically excluding most essential elements of genuine and effective collective bargaining such as good faith efforts to compose differences and reach accord . . .

Want Decision To Be Delayed

We were unable to agree with the committee on an amendment which may well be styled the "Ripper Amendment" and which proposes a drastic reorganization of the board. We feel that consideration of such an amendment should properly await the conclusion of the investigation . . .

The thinly disguised purpose of the next amendment, deceptively cloaked as relating to free speech, is obviously to permit the use of the economic weight of the employer to interfere with the free exercise of the right of self-organization . . .

We oppose other amendments proposed which fix the virtually unprecedented limitation of six months for the filing of charges and arbitrarily limit the recovery of back pay to a maximum period of six months. We maintain that labor's rights are entitled to equal protection with other property rights and that these drastic limitations on labor's remedies are obviously unfair and discriminatory.

Concerning the amendment which provides that proceedings under the act shall be conducted as far as practicable according to the rules of evidence prevailing in the District courts of the United States, we feel that, in the absence of any showing having been made to the committee of its desirability, we should hesitate to single out this agency, which is set up to safeguard labor's rights, for the imposition of technical rules of evidence . . .

On the question of review of elections and certifications, we believe that the adoption of the Garrison proposal, properly drafted, would eliminate the desires of litigants to obtain review by the courts of elections and certifications . . .

We interpose no objection to placing in the statute the provisions granting employers the right to petition for elections; provided it is not used as a device to defeat the purposes of the act.

At the present stage of our deliberations, we are inclined to favor the Garrison proposal for amendments to section 9 of the act, under which the board would be relieved of the duty of determining the appropriate bargaining unit in cases in which two or more bona fide labor organizations are in substantial disagreement or conflict as to the unit. But we seriously doubt that the draft of the majority of the committee accomplishes the purposes of the Garrison proposal.

We believe that the administration of laws by the various administrative agencies would be improved by the creation of an independent body of trial examiners as a career service, as proposed by Dean Garrison.

Congress Urged to Provide 3-Man Board, Administration

The text of the explanation of amendments to the National Labor Relations Act recommended to Congress by the special investigating committee follows:

The amendments recommended provide for the abolition of the present National Labor Relations Board and the creation of a new board of three members to be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. Not more than two of the members of the same political party. The new board is to have the same name as the present board. There are no restrictions placed on the power of the President to appoint the members of the present board to the new board.

The bill proposes to separate the prosecuting and judicial functions under the National Labor Relations Act by distributing the powers and duties under the act between the new board, which is to exercise the judicial functions on the one hand, and a new officer, to be known as the administrator of the National Labor Relations Act, who is to exercise the prosecuting functions on the other hand. The administrator is to be appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and is to have no connection whatsoever with the board. The new board is given power to appoint employes necessary to the exercise of its judicial functions, and the administrator is given power to appoint employes necessary to the exercise of his prosecuting functions.

Whereas under the present act charges of unfair labor practices are made to the regional directors of the board, and complaints based on those charges are issued by the board through the regional directors, under the amendments recommended charges will be filed with the administrator or his regional director. All the preliminary investigations in relation to charges made will be carried out by the administrator, and if he has reason to believe that the charges are true, he, and not the board, will issue the complaints.

Under the present act, the time and place for a hearing are designated in the complaint. Under the recommended amendments, the complaint issued by the administrator will be filed with the new board and that board will fix the time and place for a hearing thereon, which cannot be less than 15 days after the service of the complaint. It is hoped that this change will do away with the practice brought out in the hearing before the committee of fixing "phony" hearing dates for use as a lever to force a settlement. The amendments recommended make it the duty of the administrator to prosecute the complaint before the board or before its trial examiner conducting the hearing.

Board to Sit Merely as Judge

The board has no prosecuting function whatever, but is to sit merely as a judge to determine the facts from the opposing contentions of the administrator, with his witnesses, and the person complained against, with his witnesses. The administrator is required to be made a party to all proceedings before the board and to take such action therein as he deems necessary. Orders of the board are to be enforced in the courts, not upon application by the board as under the present law, but upon application of the administrator. Such application is required to be made when the board so requests, or may be made by the administrator on his own motion.

Similarly, proceedings to review an order of the board are brought by the party aggrieved, as petitioner, against the administrator, as respondent, and the administrator, rather than the board, has the function of bringing to the attention of the court the reasons why the order of the board should stand and be enforced. Thus, the board is not required to act as advocate in relation to a matter which it has decided as judge.

Since it has no prosecuting functions, the board is given no power to subpoena any witnesses, but is required, upon application by the administrator or any party to proceedings before the board, whether before or during a hearing, forthwith to issue subpoenas to the administrator or such party, as the case may be, for the attendance of witnesses or production of evidence. The issuance of a subpoena is to be done as a matter of course, but if a person is required by any subpoena to produce evidence under his control, and he thinks that such evidence has no bearing on the inquiry in progress, or that the subpoena does not describe with sufficient particularity the evidence whose production is required, he may move the board to revoke the issuance of the subpoena, and the board is required to revoke the issuance of the subpoena if it agrees with him.

These changes in provisions relating to the subpoena power will do away with any prior restraint upon the issuance of subpoenas and at the same time adequately protect persons from fishing expeditions. Under the amendments recommended enforcement of a subpoena against one who disregards it is to be had in court upon application of the person to whom the subpoena was issued rather than upon application of the board as under the present law.

Substantial changes are made by the amendments recommended in the power of the board in relation to determining units appropriate for the purpose of collective bargaining and certifying representatives for collective bargaining.

Under the amendments, the board is precluded from acting in these cases on its own motion, and is permitted to act only upon application by an employer under specified circumstances, or upon application by a specified percentage of, or by a representative representing a specified percentage of, employes. When such an application is made, the board is required to hold a hearing, and if as a result of the hearing it determines that the statements in the application are true and that the question is one affecting commerce, it is required by order first to determine the unit appropriate for collective bargaining. That unit can't be larger than the largest unit claimed as appropriate in an application filed by employes or representatives in the proceeding. After determining the unit appropriate for collective bargaining, the board is required to take a secret ballot of employes in that unit, and by order certify the representative or representatives for collective bargaining that have been chosen by a majority of the employes voting. This certification is to be effective for one year. Thus during this period both employes and employer will be freed from controversies with respect to employe representatives.

Power Limited If Unions Dispute

The power of the board to determine the unit appropriate for collective bargaining has one important exception. In cases where there is a dispute between two or more labor organizations, each of which in their applications in the proceeding claim to represent a majority of the employes in the unit claimed by such labor organization to be appropriated, as to the unit or units appropriate for the purposes of collective bargaining, the board is required to make a finding to that effect and is given no power in such cases to determine the appropriate unit or units until such labor organizations have by written agreement settled such dispute, or to determine any unit to be appropriate which is not specified and claimed to be such in the agreement.

Where a dispute as to the unit or units appropriate for collective bargaining exists, the employer is protected by providing that it is not an unfair labor practice for him to refuse to bargain with either faction.

Questions have arisen under the present law as to whether section 8 (1) of the act, making it an unfair labor practice to interfere with, restrain, or coerce employes in the exercise of their rights to self-organization and collective bargaining, prohibits an employer from expressing his opinion with respect to matters which may be of interest to employes or to the general public. Obviously, no law of Congress can interfere with the freedom of speech or of the press guaranteed in the Bill of Rights. Hence, a clarifying change is made in section 8 (1) of the act to provide that nothing therein is to be construed or interpreted as prohibiting any expressions of opinion with respect to any matter which may be of interest to employes or to the general public, provided that such expressions of opinion are not accompanied by acts or threats of discrimination, intimidation, or coercion.

Under the present law, the rules of evidence prevailing in the courts of law or equity are not controlling in board hearings. This requirement, and it has been construed as a requirement by the board's trial examiners, has had the effect of making records unduly long, as well as permitting the board to make findings based upon, and to draw inferences from, evidence which under the most liberal rules would never be admissible in a court of law. The character of controversies which the board decides is not such that the rules of evidence must be relaxed to any great extent in order that substantial justice may be done or vigorous enforcement of the act effected. Thus, the committee has recommended that the proceedings before the board, or before its trial examiners, shall, so far as practicable, be conducted in accordance with the rules of evidence applicable in the district courts of the United States under the rules of civil procedure adopted by the Supreme Court.

Rule of Evidence Would Be Changed

Under the present law, the board is required to issue an order if upon all the testimony taken it is of the opinion that the person complained against has engaged in an unfair labor practice. The hearings before the committee indicate that the board has confused its functions under this requirement with the function of the court in relation to findings of fact by the board in a proceeding for the enforcement or review of a board order, for there was testimony in the hearings to the effect that the board made its findings on substantial evidence rather than on a preponderance of the evidence.

The trier of facts is always required to make findings on a preponderance of the evidence. An appellate court accepts the findings of the trier of facts if those findings are supported by substantial evidence, because an appellate court is not in a position to weigh evidence, not having heard the testimony, seen the witnesses, observed their demeanor, and not being expert in evaluating testimony in a highly specialized field. Because the court cannot weigh the evidence, however, does not mean that the trier of facts should make findings with an eye to court review rather than with an eye to determining where the truth lies on a preponderance of the evidence before it. Hence, the committee recommends that the board be required to make findings upon a preponderance of the evidence in the same manner as every other trier of facts.

Under the present law, the board's findings of fact are made conclusive on the courts if they are supported by substantial evidence. While it is true that the Consolidated Edison case (1939), 305 U. S. 197 broadened to some extent the concept of what evidence was deemed substantial, the nature of the controversies which the board is called upon to decide, such as the determination of an employer's true motive for discharging an employe, are such that the courts ought to be given more power than they now have under the present law to review the board's findings of fact.

Thus, an additional standard is prescribed under which the court can overturn such findings. Under the amendments recommended, such findings are conclusive unless they are clearly erroneous, or unless they are not supported by substantial evidence.

Two minor changes have been made in the wording of the findings and declaration of policy in section 1 of the National Labor Relations Act. First, the statement that the denial by employers of the right of employes to organize and the refusal by employers to accept the procedure of collective bargaining leads to strikes, etc., has been changed in the amendments recommended to a simple statement that the failure to bargain collectively between employers and employes leads to strikes, etc. In the opinion of the committee the present language of the act constitutes an indictment of employers generally which is not justified by the facts.

The second change made in the language of the findings and declaration of policy by the amendments recommended is the elimination of the statement that it is the policy of the United States to encourage the practice and procedure of collective bargaining. In the opinion of the committee Congress should do everything in its power to protect the exercise by workers of that right, but should not require the board to encourage unionization where employes do not want it.

Under the amendments recommended, the committee, by changes in the definition of the word "employe," proposes to write into the act the rule announced by the Supreme Court in the Fansteel case (1939), 306 U. S. 240, with respect to the right of an employe who has engaged in violence or unlawful destruction or seizure of property to be reinstated by order of the board. If a preponderance of the testimony taken shows that an employe has willfully engaged in these unlawful activities, the board is to have no power to order such employe reinstated.

Questions have arisen under the present act as to whether the act compels an employer to enter into an agreement with the representatives of a majority of his employes in an appropriate bargaining unit. The Supreme Court, in the Jones-Laughlin case (1937), 301 U. S. 1, stated that there was nothing in the act to compel an agreement, and the committee proposes to write into the act in terms that cannot be misunderstood the rules thus announced by the Supreme Court. "Bargain collectively" is defined as including the requirement that employer meet and confer with his employes or their representatives, listen to their complaints, and make every reasonable effort to compose differences, but is not to be construed as compelling either party to reach an agreement or to make counter proposals. The definition is in substance the definition announced by the Supreme Court in the Virginian Railway case (1937), 300 U. S. 515.

Under the amendments recommended, statutes of limitations are provided for in two instances. First, it is provided that no complaint can be issued which is based on a charge of any unfair labor practice which occurred more than six months prior to the time such charge was made to the administration. Second, it is provided that no order for the payment of back pay or other money shall order such payment with respect to a period longer than six months.

Cases have been brought to the attention of the committee where the decision of the board has not been rendered until at least 18 months after the case was argued before the board, and in which the board has issued an order directing the payment of money during this entire period of time. It is hoped that this provision will act to speed up board decisions.

An amendment recommended by the committee provides that in situations where the case is heard before a single member of the board or before a trial examiner, such member or examiner shall prepare and serve on the parties an intermediate report together with a recommended order, and that unless exceptions are filed thereto within 20 days after service, or within such further period of time as the board may allow, such recommended order will become the order of the board. The board is given power at any time prior to the filing in court for a petition for review or enforcement to modify any such order or any other order issued or made by it.

Under the amendments recommended, the term "agricultural labor" is clarified by definition. Such term is not defined in the present law, and the board in the North Whittier Heights case has held that employes of farm cooperatives are not agricultural labor. This decision of the board was affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, and hence an amendment is necessary to exclude from the coverage of the act employes which it was never the intention of Congress to include in that coverage. Hence the committee recommends that "agricultural labor" have the same meaning as in the Social Security Act. This definition was carefully worked out by the Committee on Ways and Means, and has been passed upon and approved by both Houses of Congress.

Under the amendments recommended the board will be effectively precluded from setting up an economics division. The hearings before the committee indicate that there is no justification whatsoever for the existence of this division, and there will be less justification for its existence under the other amendments which impose on the board the exercise of judicial functions only.

Smith Labor Plan Brews a Storm

a Presidentially-appointed administrator independent of the Labor Board.

This new official, whose appointment would also be subject to senatorial approval, would issue complaints of Wagner Act violation and would have charge of prosecutions.

Designed to meet the oft-repeated allegation that the board now serves as "judge and jury," this provision would permit the board "to sit merely as a judge to determine the facts," Smith explained.

In the minority statement objections were raised both to reorganization of the board and creation of the post of administrator. Revealing that they were willing to add two new members to the present board, Healey and Murdock observed that whether to abolish the board as now constituted was a question that should await the conclusion of the investigation.

Mrs. Norton Would Wait

Chairman Norton of the House Labor Committee yesterday reiterated her belief that the committee should take no action on them until the inquiry—for which a second $50,000 recently was voted—has been completed.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Norton said that her committee, which has just completed its own hearings on Wagner Act amendments, will meet Wednesday to decide whether it will defer action until Smith's final report has been received.

Rival Farm Programs

Like Senator Taft, Mr. Thomas E. Dewey has no panacea to offer as a cure for agricultural ills. Indeed, both Mr. Taft, in his recent Springfield speech, and Mr. Dewey in his address at Lincoln on Wednesday, indorse a program of action that at first glance appears to differ but slightly from the one that the Administration is following.

The difference is chiefly one of emphasis and of attitude. Thus, while Secretary Wallace is anxious to press forward with his program, seemingly confident of a successful ending for his various control plans, Messers Taft and Dewey believe that the interests of the farmer will be best served by retreating cautiously.

Both Republican candidates point out that although the Administration has spent billions of dollars to improve the economic position of the farmer, the farm problem nevertheless remains pressing. Therefore, they conclude that the program is a failure, and favor progressive relaxation and modification of existing control methods. However, Mr. Taft, as well as Mr. Dewey advocates soil conservation, provided the conservation program is not a subterfuge for production control. Both also emphasize the desirability of withdrawing more marginal land from cultivation, and unite in condemning the methods that have been employed to restrict production.

Senator Taft notes that production control programs nearly always break down, tending to make a bad situation worse. Mr. Dewey cites statistics showing that record crops have been grown on reduced acreages and asserts that no progress has been made toward solution of the surplus problem.

Yet, despite their skepticism of the value of restriction plans, the two men agree that production controls, however ineffective, cannot be altogether abandoned. Mr. Taft says that "temporarily there is a surplus problem, and plans to prevent a surplus may be practically necessities in the case of particular crops." Mr. Dewey suggests, rather vaguely, that for the time being "Government must give aid in a voluntary program sponsored by agriculture itself for the elimination of temporary excess surpluses."

These concessions undoubtedly somewhat weaken the force of the attacks upon the Administration program. They invite questions as to what alternative control methods would be more feasible or workable than those now in force. And more definite answers to these questions will have to be found by Republican candidates as the campaign progresses.

Our Silver Folly

At its last meeting in Washington about two weeks ago the Federal Advisory Council indorsed Senator Townsend's bill to discontinue purchases of foreign silver. The New York State Chamber of Commerce followed this week with an appeal to Congress, likewise urging cessation of foreign silver buying.

In its resolution the Federal Advisory Council called attention to the inflationary potentialities of the silver acquisitions by stressing the fact that silver purchases increase our already excessively large bank reserves. But that is only one of numerous reasons why the policy should be abandoned. As the New York State Chamber of Commerce says, gold has been pouring into the United States in such volume that "the objective of silver reaching the one-to-four ratio of the combined monetary stocks of gold and silver seems presently to be impossible."

The alternative aim of raising the price of silver to $1.29 per ounce is equally hopeless. Indeed, the present price of silver is maintained only by Government purchases. Any attempt to dispose of our present great holdings would result in a worldwide price collapse.

The only remaining argument in favor of a program that has been a conspicuous failure as a monetary experiment is that it is a useful instrument of foreign policy. There is no doubt that Mexico, the world's largest silver-producing country, has benefited from our folly. But our relations with Mexico have certainly not been improved by subsidization of her silver industry.

In short, innumerable reasons can be cited in support of Senator Townsend's bill. It seems impossible to discover any good reasons for not passing it. If there are any, the Department of State and the Treasury have kept the secret from the public.

NLRB Amendments

By a 3-to-2 vote the Smith Committee, after weeks of study and public hearings, has recommended a number of sweeping amendments to the National Labor Relations Act. Until opportunity has been afforded for full discussion of the suggested changes by experts well acquainted with the practical details of administration, it would be hazardous to express a firm opinion as to the merits and disadvantages of the proposed changes. It can, however, be said that the majority proposals are aimed at correction of certain conspicuous evils exposed in the course of the committee hearings.

One of the outstanding weaknesses of the present organization is that prosecuting and judicial functions are vested in the same agency. An overwhelming mass of testimony indicated that conferences frequently took place between NLRB trial examiners and Government attorneys appearing before them to prosecute complaints of unfair labor practices. The evidence was the more damaging because witnesses admitting the practice were so obviously convinced that they had done no wrong. Indeed, under the conditions now prevailing, the aloofness of judge from prosecutor, so necessary to assure justice to those accused of unfair practices, is almost impossible to maintain.

Consequently the proposal to divest the NLRB of its prosecuting functions, and set up an entirely separate organization headed by an administrator, is aimed at a major evil of the existing system. Under recommended amendments the administrator would prosecute complaints before the NLRB or its trial examiner. The board and its representatives would sit only as judges to determine the facts from the statements of the administrator and his witnesses, on the one hand, and the person complained of and his witnesses, on the other hand.

The minority members of the Smith Committee complain that there would be no remedy by appeal to the board or otherwise "from an arbitrary or capricious refusal of the administrator to proceed with a charge made in good faith." But why should one assume that the official appointed to fill such an important office would be derelict in his duty, or any more arbitrary or capricious than agents of the board?

The segregation of the judicial and prosecuting functions would have the further advantage of setting up a new Labor Relations Board whose members might or might not be the present incumbents. The President would, at any rate, have a good excuse for making changes in personnel without reflection upon members who have laid themselves open to criticism.

Another important amendment proposed by the committee would relieve the NLRB from the duty of determining the appropriate unit for collective bargaining in cases of dispute between two or more labor organizations, all claiming to be representative of a majority of the employes.

The board would be forbidden to act until the labor organizations had settled their dispute by written agreement. Nor could it determine any unit to be appropriate unless it were so specified in the agreement. This proposed change would enable the board to avoid the unpleasant necessity of antagonizing one or other faction each time it makes a decision between a C. I. O. and an A. F. of L. group.

It is also properly proposed that, in factional disputes over the proper bargaining agency, the employer may not be charged with unfair labor practices if he refuses to bargain with either faction.

There are numerous other amendments of both major and minor importance many of which will doubtless give rise to controversy. But the Smith report at least demonstrates that the committee has profited by its prolonged study and has made a most conscientious effort to deal with the problems that have developed in administering the law.

Congress has been provided with intelligent suggestions for improvement which, if not acceptable in their entirety, certainly afford an excellent starting point for discussion leading to needed legislative action.

Puerto Rican Problems

Of all the outlying territories and possessions of the United States, none is physically closer than Puerto Rico. Yet so far as the average American's interest in and understanding of the island's problems are concerned, Puerto Rico might almost as well be located on Mars.

For this and other reasons the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom is rendering a useful and patriotic service in sponsoring the institute on Puerto Rican problems to be held here today and tomorrow. During these two days the political, social and economic questions that perplex the island, and make for chronic difficulties in its relations with the mainland, will be canvassed by a variety of experts.

Such a meeting can be productive of nothing but good. Puerto Rico has suffered more from indifference and neglect than from any other cause. And while the present Administration has manifested much interest in the island, the remedial measures undertaken have had only partial success. Puerto Rico remains a chronic sore spot.

If the Puerto Rican problem is to be solved, what is needed, above all, is greater public concern. To this end the current institute is in a position to contribute.

Another Maiden Voyage

Few will fail to mark the contrast between the maiden voyage of the Queen Mary, nearly four years ago, and that of her even greater sister ship, the Queen Elizabeth, which slipped stealthily into New York yesterday.

There was nothing secret about the Queen Mary's first crossing of the Atlantic. Far from it. Every detail of the trip was blazoned in the headlines of all the world's newspapers. And there was nothing hazardous about it. The passengers were as safe as they would have been in their own homes and surrounded by infinitely more luxury. Europe was then at peace although, three months before the ship left Southampton, Hitler had taken the first long step toward war by marching his troops into the disarmed Rhineland.

The Queen Elizabeth's maiden voyage belongs in an altogether different category. Her departure last Saturday was a closely guarded secret. There were no brass bands, no radio broadcasts, no festivities and no passengers to make a carnival of the crossing. The first the world knew of the Queen Elizabeth's departure was when she reached American territorial waters, a gray specter of 85,000 tons, a most retiring Queen of the Seas.

In New York she has taken her place alongside her sister, to remain there, in all probability for the duration of the war. As a luxury liner her virtues at the moment are negative—one less target for Nazi air raiders, one helpless civilian the less for the Royal Air Force and the Admiralty to guard. The Queen Elizabeth is the latest—and the largest—of the evacuees, a dramatic symbol of British daring, British caution, and British foresight.

Editor And Teacher

Throughout his long and very active life Dr. John H. Finley, editor emeritus of the New York Times, combined the roles of newspaperman and teacher. And never would he admit that there is any fundamental inconsistency between the two.

In this conclusion, as habitually in his judgments, Dr. Finley was shrewd. Also, he knew whereof he spoke. Twice a college president, over terms totaling 15 years, he was for an even longer period a practicing journalist. And in both worlds, the academic and the journalistic, he won distinction if not eminence.

The difference between the newspaper and the academy, as educational forces, is one of degree rather than of kind. While the instructional role of the college is more restricted, more purposeful and more formative, that of the press is more pervasive, more comprehensive and more persuasive.

The two forces, however, are not subject to direct contrast. It is not as though there were an age at which one should ideally stop reading all newspapers and proceed to concentrate on more selective forms of information. It is not as though the newspaper were designed primarily for the uninstructed and the college limited to the intellectually outstanding. Often, as Dr. Finley used to say, the newspaperman can be a better researcher, and a better distributor of the fruits of research, than the most honored academician.

In a democracy the press and schools are filling a joint function. It is, therefore, well that there should be men, like Dr. Finley, who see the need of synthesizing the two occupations. There is room for much more scholarship in American journalism. There is room for much more of the alertness and informational background of journalism in our colleges.

"Editor, educator, author" Dr. Finley called himself at the outset of the column of distinctions allotted him in "Who's Who." Perhaps the second definition would properly cover the other two.

English To English

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

With any who do not enjoy listening to the speeches of English statesmen delivered before English audiences we differ radically. We admit that the speakers frequently thresh old straw and get nothing but chaff. We agree that the questions discussed are often of small and only academic concern to us. For all that, however, we never willingly forego the opportunity to listen.

What fascinates is to await that moment when the speaker at last manages to work his audience up to a pitch of uncontrollable excitement and enthusiasm. We listen with bated breath, laying small wagers as to when the audience will break all bonds and cut loose like everything. Any possible dullness and tedium is repaid many times when the English eventually become fully emotional and murmur, "Heah! Heah!"

The extraordinarily high birth rate in China is probably due to the fact that most Chinese look alike.

Crime Wave

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with extreme interest the editorials and articles being featured in The Post with respect to the current "crime wave." I admire your courage in bringing forward this unfavorable publicity of our Capital City before the Nation.

However, I think that your solution to the problem is very incorrect. It is no solution at all because it does not attack the cause of the problem. I am sure that if the police force of the District of Columbia were quadrupled, this "crime wave" would continue, though more of the so-called criminals would be caught.

As long as relief is barred to "employables;" as long as the situation in the Department of Welfare is as rotten as it is; as long as there are hungry people in Washington and men who have to watch their children dying of malnutrition; as long as the District Commissioners are responsible to a political-minded administration and not to the people whom they are supposed to serve, there will be continuous and repetitious "crime waves."

The solution of the current "crime wave" is not additional policing but an extension of relief, the restoration of WPA instead of retrenchment. Finally, it is necessary to get the Commissioners to act, not by calling in the police officials for a conference—but by calling welfare and relief officials to prepare a budget adequate for the needs of the people of Washington, and it is up to us as residents (we are not citizens, yet) to demand that Congress give to the problems of Washington the same amount of concern as was given to Finland, and grant sufficient money to care for the people who need assistance.

For Pegler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am for Pegler. He is a great columnist. While I do not always agree with him, at the same time I would think very little of a man with whom I would agree in every particular. If I did that, I would think that we both were wrong.

It is a good idea to read or hear someone expound his views which are not in accord with those of the reader or listener. If the latter can take it without getting peeved at the other fellow because of his viewpoint, he is a real fellow. C. A. B.

A Case For Intervention

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That American sympathy is overwhelmingly anti-Nazi is so obvious that I shall not attempt to offer evidence. And that the United States has a stake in this war is now conceded by the majority of its citizens.

But when one suggests that the United States abandon neutral status to take its place beside England and France, many of these same citizens balk. "How can we," they ask, "sever relations with Germany until Germany shall have committed some overt act against our interests?"

They do not doubt that recent armament appropriations passed by Congress are for defense, not against world democracies, but against the world's gangster dictators. Few will question that the millions of dollars now taken from the Nation's income for armaments could be saved if it were not for these dictators. Furthermore, a goodly portion of them possess enough elementary grounding in economics to know that the greater the part of a national budget devoted to armaments, the lower the average living standard of its people.

Having reasoned thus far, it would seem but a step to the realization that the United States must remain lower than it otherwise would, so long as the dictator menace survives.

What more direct motive for active American participation in the task of ridding the world of international gangsters need be sought by an American father than the knowledge that the suppression of such gangsters will mean an increase in the material and educational benefits he can provide for his children?

Nor would we find the typical American laborer so inclined toward pacifist nonintervention could it clearly be brought home that, with Hitlerism squashed, he could earn the same purchasing power in wages as at present, with one or two hours less work each day. HARRY STARK.
Washington, March 6.

Perhaps They Can Afford It

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of March 6, "First Things Last," is both interesting and thought-provoking. It would seem, however, to leave one important question unanswered—by what reasoning should the 25 or 30 per cent of our citizens who own automobiles be expected to contribute more to the city's health, welfare, and educational institutions than the remaining 70 or 75 per cent.

Are these not responsibilities to be shared by the community as a whole? Is car ownership a true or fair measuring rod to determine how such a taxpayer should be asked to pay for schools, playgrounds, welfare, or public health?

The editorial correctly states that the highway fund, composed of "receipts from the gasoline tax, special property taxes for street improvements, operators' permit fees, registration and weight taxes, automobile title fees, inspection fees, and other miscellaneous charges," supports all highway improvements. Yet the nearly $5,000,000 collected entirely from motorists last year supported more than that.

From it was paid 15 per cent of the entire appropriation for the Metropolitan Police Department, intended to take care of the entire expense of police traffic enforcement, all of the expense of maintaining the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, including the issuance of 80,636 titles, the registration of 203,026 motor vehicles, examination of more than 60,000 persons for operator permits, issuance of 110,223 permits, revocation or suspension of 1,431 licenses, inspection of 238,000 automobiles and trucks, painting of 833,938 feet of white and yellow lines and the placement or removal of 150,732 traffic signs, all the expense of maintaining the District's trees and parking, considered among the finest in any large American city—all paid for by the motorists.

There can be no question regarding the urgent needs of the city's "second-rate health, welfare, and educational facilities," and certainly this is a situation deserving of the most sympathetic consideration by those charged with the responsibility of appropriating funds. Yet somehow, in all fairness, it would seem that the District would be guilty of class legislation and discrimination of the worst sort were it to ask more from the motorists than from any one else, to meet these obligations.

Hapsburg Rule

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The coming of Otto Hapsburg to the United States for the announced purpose of "making a study" of American democracy and also of American Midwestern farming methods, appears, on the surface, very commendable. We could wish him success in his studies.

Unfortunately for this program, however, this young man desires passionately to be King, if not Emperor. The first lesson in the American type of democracy is the abolition of kings and of all other hereditary titles. Furthermore, he wants to make his study of American farming all within the space of three weeks, before hastening back to Europe. That's a rather large order. Besides, farming operations in these latitudes are mostly at a standstill during March.

It is also reported that young Otto would like to have the Czechs included in his proposed Danubian kingdom; but it is not yet revealed how this is to be brought about. The Czechs generally feel that the biggest mistake they ever made was the election, in 1526, of a Hapsburg, the Archduke Ferdinand, as their King.

And most of the time since that date they have been cursed with Hapsburg misrule and oppression. The Hapsburgs not only repeatedly betrayed Czech rights and aspirations, and failed to honor their own promises, but generally sought the destruction of Czech culture and nationality. They ruled the Czechs for the latter's destruction!

During the 20 years of their republic the Czechs demonstrated that they can get along without Hapsburg guidance or protection, and there is no desire among them to bring back the malevolent rule under which they suffered for centuries. EDWARD WOLESENSKY.

"Two Cents For Finland"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After taking out the various large-scale contributions by various of our large financial interests, it would seem to me that you a little overestimate the contributions of the average American. But congratulations on the fact of your recognition that the American people have not been "sold down the river."

To say that the lack of response on the part of the American people was due to poor leadership and lack of good advice on the part of the Government, is surely the height of something or other, a psychologist would have a name for it. In the face of the ceaseless clamor of admonition, advice, plea and prayer with which the papers, pulpits and public rostrums were filled during the term of this drive for funds for Finland, the statement that there was a lack of advice is certainly not understandable.

"There has been a flood of emotional expression and plenty of denunciation of the barbarity of the Russian invasion." This quotation from the editorial is beyond doubt accurate, but if the title of this editorial is also accurate, this "emotional expression" and "denunciation" has not been on the part of the people, as by implication, the editorial states.

May it not be possible that we are witnessing the peculiar phenomenon of the American sheep getting out of the fold and wandering at will and against the command of the shepherd? Such has happened before—1936 for instance. You probably remember the incident. B. S. FITZGERALD.

The Post Impressionist

At 5:15 P. M. Today

When the clocks of the Nation register 5:15 this afternoon, only a few citizens will attach special significance to the hour. The few will recall a 5:15 o'clock exactly ten years ago, which marked the death of William Howard Taft and brought to a close one of the most dramatic quarrels in history—that one between "Teddy" Roosevelt and "Bill" Taft.

Taft's family, his colleagues, the sports writers whom he invariably called to see "how Yale came out today"—those who remember, think of him as good-natured and conscientious but what they remember clearest of all perhaps is the Taft-Roosevelt controversy.

They say that Taft was a large, easy-going young man, who first came to public notice as President of the Philippine Commission. In 1904 he accepted the position of Secretary of War and became a close friend and adviser of President Theodore Roosevelt. The two made an excellent team Taft's easy-going conservatism counteracted the President's impulsive qualities, he became the "trouble shooter" of the Administration. Teddy vacationed without fear of what might come up at home "Everything was all right," the President said, "with Taft sitting on the lid."

Soon after Roosevelt's declaration in 1904 that he would not run again, the name of Taft as a successor came to the front. In 1908 Taft ran as Roosevelt's chosen man and in 1909 he took office.

The new President was a troubled, harassed man from the start—he seemed to have a knack for causing trouble. Roosevelt had zealously refrained from attempting tariff revision, thus avoiding an issue fraught with political death to Presidents. Taft promptly plunged into it.

T. R. was scarcely more than 50 years old. On election night in 1904 he had said, "The wise custom which limits the President to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination." What happened to change his mind is told in the newspaper headlines of the day.

After Taft dismissed Pinchot, one of the Roosevelt favorites, columns which had carried accounts of a phenomenal friendship turned to words little less than hatred. It was inevitable that Taft and the "Rough Rider" should break. The former believed in a government of laws, not of men Teddy held the law lightly; he believed in a government of men, or better, of a single man, himself.

After T. R.'s return from Africa in 1911 he once more became good copy. Speculation as to his plans for the future was frequent and varied. On March 6 the papers said: "There is no likelihood of Roosevelt's running March 8 brought developments which led certain parties to believe that Roosevelt "is paving the way either for his own candidacy in 1912" or for some "dark horse now being groomed."

Teddy always managed to keep himself before the public. He pushed a button and opened the Roosevelt Storage Dam, he gave specimens to the Smithsonian, he had a grandchild. A Washington Post reporter of the time observed that the "Colonel hasn't forgotten the trick of sending in his communications on Sunday night when the other news is slack." Gradually it became evident that the former President was planning an "anything to beat Taft campaign."

On February 22, 1912, the anniversary of George Washington's Birthday, Roosevelt was quoted on the front pages of papers throughout the Nation as saying, "My hat is in the ring. You will have my answer Monday."

The former President launched a mighty blast against the Taft Administration in which the words "suicide" and "murder" figured prominently. The President kept silent. After the Chicago convention awarded the party nomination in steam-roller fashion, to Taft, Roosevelt added the words "thief" and "robber" to his repertoire and with no definite object in view, proposed to reconstruct the American way of living according to some fanciful, unformulated plan.

Harper's Weekly records the following dialogue when Teddy appeared at a hotel window in Chicago and spoke to the crowd below.

Theodore—My friends (applause), Chicago is a bad place to steal in (great laughter).

Band—Everybody's doin' it, doin' it (cheers).

Theodore—The receiver of stolen goods is no better than the thief. This is a contest between the people and the people will win (applause). It is a naked fight against theft, thieves, thieves!

Band—What the hell do we care?

Theodore retires and the crowd exits.

There are those who say "Will" and "Teddy" were later reconciled, through the good offices of their mutual friend the late Col. F. L. Remmel, Republican national committeeman from Arkansas. During a visit to Mr. Taft in 1918, Col. Remmel upon learning that Roosevelt was very ill suggested that Taft send a message of condolence to the family. The telegram was sent.

If it is true that the message was received in the spirit it was sent perhaps this story, too, had a happy conclusion. When Teddy died, in 1919, one who read Taft's eulogy of him would have thought bitterness forgotten. Yet the fact remains that of all the numerous mementoes and pictures in the Taft home when the former President died there was not one of the "Rough Rider."

It is ten years now that Taft has lain in Arlington Cemetery. Presidents have come and Presidents have gone but political strife and campaign epithets have gone on forever. The chances are that if offered the opportunity Taft would have no desire to return to Washington to witness the possible Taft-Roosevelt marathon.

Books And Things

Finland's Story

HOT FROM the front, full of the memory of falling Russian bombs, is Herbert Elliston's "Finland Fights" (Little, Brown, $2.75). The cool work of an unimpassioned, impartial scholar who wrote his book two years ago when Finland was still a question mark to the world is J. Hampden Jackson's "Finland" (Macmillan, $3). The two books together fill in the background behind yesterday's, today's and tomorrow's headlines.

Mr. Elliston, British-born, China-trained, American by marriage and adoption, is the financial editor of the Christian Science Monitor. He visited Finland briefly in 1936 and again in 1939. This time he arrived on the very eve of war; he was one of three correspondents who visited the Finno-Russian frontier just 18 hours before it became a front, looked at the Russian sentries 800 yards away and talked with the Finns on guard at the very spot where, Russian propaganda claimed, provocative shells had been fired a day before. The Finns had known only a Sunday peace.

The night after Mr. Elliston left the frontier he was awakened in his Helsinki hotel by the first Russian bombs. He was still in Helsinki when the Russian foreign minister was telling the American Ambassador, Mr. Steinhardt, that it was not true that Soviet airmen had bombed civilian populations.

The most revealing part of Mr. Elliston's book is his eye-witness story. When he retells the history of Finland, or interprets its institutions, he wisely follows Mr. Jackson's book published in England a year ago. On those first air raids, he says, the rash Soviet fliers dropped to a 600-foot level, and the Finnish antiaircraft guns brought down two of them on the first day, four on the second. After that the Russian fliers flew two miles high. Much of their ammunition is reported defective, but the Russian bombs used at Helsinki were more effective than the bombs the Germans used in Poland. They were delayed incendiary bombs, some not bursting for as much as 24 hours after they fell. In others the incendiary stuff is inclosed in bullets which fly out like torches when the bomb strikes; one bomb may thus start half a dozen fires.

As a result of his observation of the Russian air attack, Mr. Elliston makes a novel suggestion: he believes the city safer than the country. The Russians have bombed and machine-gunned the smallest villages, and villages are usually less well equipped with underground shelters and anti-aircraft guns than are the towns.

Mannerheim, Ryti and Tanner, of Finland, seem to Mr. Elliston comparable with our George Washington, Alexander Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson. He paints suggestive pictures of all three. Mannerheim is the cavalry general of studied charm, who served in the Russian army before he fought for Finnish freedom. (Indeed, Mannerheim did not even speak Finnish until after 1917.) Ryti, one of the ablest bankers in Europe, is responsible for Finland's debt policy; he is today the Finnish prime minister. Tanner, an old-time Socialist, former president of the International Cooperative Alliance, is foreign minister.

From Tanner and from Paasikivi,, his fellow negotiator in Moscow, Mr. Elliston learned some new details of the eight weeks of negotiations which preceded the war; his summary of that diplomatic history is an essential supplement to Mr. Jackson's history, which ends before the present crisis began. Neither negotiator was in any doubt that Stalin personally made all the decisions; Stalin was, apparently, obsessed with a fear of a western coalition against Russia, distrustful of his own German ally, and determined to have a Russian fortress at Hango, guarding the northern entrance to the Gulf of Finland and the approach to Leningrad. And he miscalculated badly.

Mr. Jackson presents a brief, readable, systematic history of the Finnish people, and a reader who preserves a measure of pre-war skepticism about saints, individual or national, will find his book solidly satisfying. Mr. Jackson likes the Finns, but he knows them to be human.

Mr. Jackson does not mitigate the horror of the White terror of its early days, but he traces the triumphant evolution of a reasonably stable democracy out of that welter of hates, noting the Lex Kallio, or land distribution law of 1922, as a major factor in giving Finland—despite occasional lapses—social peace and a higher standard of living even than that of much-praised Sweden.

U. S. Plans New Pacts

By Andrue Berding

Associated Press Staff Writer

With British Dominions

THE UNITED STATES, it was learned yesterday, is negotiating treaties of conciliation with the warring British dominions—Canada, Australia, Union of South Africa and New Zealand.

The treaties will provide that any dispute arising between the United States and a dominion shall be referred to a permanent conciliation commission, to be composed of five members. There will be a separate commission for each dominion.

The treaties may become of more than ordinary significance because all of the dominions are at war with Germany. Hence, it is possible that difficulties arising out of the present economic warfare will create disputes requiring conciliation.

The independent status of the dominions, which came with the Statute of Westminster in 1931, accounts for the negotiations. The United States has a conciliation treaty with Great Britain, but its references to the dominions are now regarded as out of date.

The main purpose of the treaties is to prevent possible questions between the United States and the four dominions from becoming serious.

Under the treaties, if signed, the United States and each of the dominions will set up in advance a five-man commission. The United States will name two members, one of whom must be an American and the other a non-American, and the dominion will name two, of whom one must be a citizen of the dominion and one must not. The two governments will agree upon the fifth.

Either of the two governments may submit a grievance to the commission, or the commission, on seeing a dispute growing, may offer its services. The findings of a conciliation commission are not binding on the two governments. This constitutes the difference between conciliation and arbitration, the latter's decision being binding, the former's not.

The value of conciliation is that, through such procedure, the points at issue are clarified, some of them eliminated entirely, and suggestions for a solution advanced. Often as not, these suggestions prove acceptable.

The treaties with the dominions would replace a portion of the so-called Bryan Conciliation Treaty with Great Britain, signed in 1914, a few months after the World War broke out. That treaty gave the King of England the right to name conciliators on behalf of a dominion in case of a divergence between the dominion and the United States.

A Catholic Nominee?

By Ernest Lindley

Could He Be Elected?

IS THIS COUNTRY broad-minded enough yet to elect a Catholic President of the United States? Or Vice President? A somewhat spirited discussion of these questions has followed the recent publication in this column of the substance of a conversation between the President and a Democratic "stalwart."

As everybody knows—Catholics best of all—there isn't a molecule of religious prejudice in the President. Twice he placed Al Smith in nomination for the Presidency. In 1928 he came out of his temporary retirement from active public life—despite his sincere (but erroneous) fear he was sacrificing his chance fully to recover his health—in response to the frantic pleadings of Al Smith and his friends that only Roosevelt, as the nominee for Governor, could save the State of New York for the Democratic State ticket and Al Smith. By unrelenting pressure he made a Jew, Herbert H. Lehman, his successor as Governor of New York.

AS PRESIDENT, Roosevelt has appointed to office more Catholics, several times over, than any other President in our history. And more Jews, too, although their number is small compared to his Catholic appointees. He has had two Catholics in his Cabinet—and named a third, the late Senator Walsh, of Montana, who died before taking the Attorney Generalship. He has put a Catholic and a Jew on the Supreme Court.

The record does not need elaboration. It has subjected him and his Administration to malicious whispering campaigns. More than once prominent representatives of minority religious groups have urged him not to appoint one of their faith to high office lest he provoke the intolerance which he and they wished to allay and eventually to exterminate. No public man in our history probably has done as much as Roosevelt to override and stamp out religious prejudice. In private conversation he has said more than once that he wished that sometime he could help to elect a member of a minority religious group to the Presidency.

In the rare instances in which Roosevelt has advised or decided against the selection of a Catholic or a Jew for any office because of his faith it has been as a result of his cold appraisal of the political factors involved, and with a view to avoiding the incitement of prejudices which would be an obstacle to the long-time development of religious toleration.

NOW WHAT would be the practical consequences of nominating a Catholic on the Democratic national ticket this year? Applied, this means Jim Farley—or, remotely, Frank Murphy. So far I have not discussed this question with any practical politician who doesn't believe that Farley would do better as a Presidential candidate than Al Smith did. When Al ran the Solid South crumbled. He lost not only all the border States, but four of the States which had gone Democratic in every election since the Reconstruction Period. In the North he won only Massachusetts and Rhode Island, obtaining 87 electoral votes in all.

In addition to his Catholicism, Smith bore the handicap of "wetness" at a time when prohibition was a lively issue. He was unmistakably a product of the sidewalks of New York. He knew next to nothing about the country outside New York State. I traveled with Al Smith as a newspaper correspondent during most of the 1928 campaign. I never saw a candidate who, consciously or unconsciously, did less to ingratiate himself to people whose customs and background were different from his.

Farley is a different type. He comes from rural New York. He knows the Nation as a whole. He is respected and beloved by Democratic politicians, North and South, East and West. He is a teetotaller. Almost certainly, Farley would not lose a Southern State, although the ugly phenomenon of religious prejudice might well weigh the scales against him in some of the border States as well as in the even more delicately balanced States in the North and West. It might help him in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and two or three other States.

WOULD FARLEY'S religion handicap the Democratic national ticket if he were nominated for Vice President, rather than President? To this question I have received many answers from practical politicians. The consensus is something like this:

1. With a healthy, vigorous and dominating Presidential candidate: No, not seriously. With Roosevelt, for example: No. (Actually this combination is impracticable since the Constitution prohibits Presidential electors from voting for both a President and Vice President from the same State.)

2. With a candidate of weaker personality or of advanced age: Yes. By the test of age, this might apply to either John N. Garner or Cordell Hull.

Perhaps the fires of religious prejudice have burned themselves out in this country. One would like to think so. Most practical politicians with whom I have talked think they could not be fanned again to the intensity with which they burned in 1928. But they are fearful of reviving them, especially in an election which may be close for other reasons.

Peace For Finland?

Rumors Out Of Stockholm

THE SPIRIT of appeasement is not dead; it has only shifted its habitation. Before April, 1939, its most ardent advocates were to be found in London and Paris. Today the appeasers are most numerous and most clamorous in the capitals of neutral lands.

This is the meaning and significance of the rumors emanating from Stockholm and Copenhagen that an attempt at third-power mediation of the Soviet-Finnish conflict is under way.

Up to now these rumors have not been confirmed. Moscow has remained silent on the subject, and so has Helsinki. But the rumors have been so persistent and accompanied by such apparent wealth of detail that it is difficult to believe they are wholly the figment of somebody's imagination. Behind so much smoke there must be some fire.

IT IS CERTAINLY not difficult to understand the anxiety of the Swedish government to have the war in Finland brought to an end before that country is wholly crushed and subjugated.

Sweden's situation was already parlous before the Russo-Finnish War broke out. It has become well-nigh desperate since then. The country is torn by conflicting emotions and plagued by mounting fears. A considerable section of the population wants the government to cast prudence aside and openly come to the aid of Sweden's hard-pressed neighbors. If such assistance is not forthcoming, it is pointed out, Finland will go under and the shadow of the Red bear will darken all the rest of the Scandinavian peninsula.

But as against that unpleasant possibility there is the more immediately dangerous possibility that Swedish military intervention in Finland will be regarded by Germany as a hostile act. In that event Sweden, far from being able to assist the hard-pressed Finns, will herself become a battlefield.

In the meantime Sweden has become alarmed over still a third possibility, namely, that the Allies may, regardless of Norwegian and Swedish objections, use the Scandinavian peninsula as a base of operations against both Russia and Germany. That may appear far-fetched. Perhaps it is far-fetched. Yet one need only recall what happened in Greece in the World War to realize that faced by a desperate situation the Allies may resort to desperate measures.

HOW CAN SWEDEN escape from the dilemma in which she finds herself?

To this question there is and can be no certain answer. But one possibility of doing so lies in finding a way to end the Russo-Finnish war. If that could be done without resulting in a complete destruction of Finland's independence, the Swedes and the Norwegians could breathe easier even though Finland might thenceforth be at the complete mercy of her tremendous neighbor.

Suppose, for instance, the terms of such a settlement are exactly those which Stalin offered the Finns on the eve of the war and which the Helsinki government rejected. That would mean the end of the Mannerheim Line, the loss of Hangoe, which would become a Russian naval base, the loss, as well, of Petsamo. Finland would thus be reduced to the status of Czecho-Slovakia after Munich. And it was because they refused to compromise their independence by such concessions, although willing to meet the Russian demands part way, that the Finns went to war.

BUT IN VIEW of the vast effort which Russia has found it necessary to make to get even as far as she has in overcoming Finnish resistance, is there any reason to believe that Moscow would be content with the fulfillment of the original demands alone?

This is possible but not probable. For reasons of prestige, Moscow must insist on greater Finnish concessions than Stalin demanded before the war began. To ask for less or to ask for no more would be tantamount to an admission that Russia has been so exhausted by her effort in the Finnish war as to require a respite at any cost.

Moreover, if the Finns now show a willingness to meet Russian conditions, which, last November they rejected as destructive of their country's independence, Moscow could reasonably assume that the Finns are ready to throw up the sponge. In that case there would be little point in failing to insist on maximum rather than minimum concessions from Finland.

It is probable, therefore, that Sweden's eagerness to have peace between Finland and Russia restored (an eagerness undoubtedly shared by her Scandinavian neighbors and by Germany) is not fully shared either in Helsinki or in Moscow. But of that we shall know more in the next few days. In the meantime the Red army presses on and Finnish resistance shows no signs of weakening.

The Russian-Finnish Peace Move

The Sequel May Be A Nazi-Controlled 'Security Bloc'

By Dorothy Thompson.

UNDOUBTEDLY a peace move is being engineered by Russia and Germany through Sweden, with a view to ending the Russo-Finnish war. If the move succeeds, even on terms more favorable to the Finns than those reported in the Thursday newspapers, it will be a tremendous strategical and political victory for the totalitarian states, including Italy.

The effect of it will be felt not only in the northeast, but all the way to the Black Sea and the Near East. The delay of the whole world in sending material help to Finland will be paid for by the greatest Hitler-Stalin triumph, which has cost the Russians much blood, but cost Hitler nothing at all. Stalin will have repaid Hitler for Poland.

SWEDEN'S POSITION is precarious in the extreme. If the Allies send aid to Finland via the other Scandinavian countries—aid, that is to say, in the form of munitions and troops—Germany will regard their passage through Sweden as a breach of neutrality, and Sweden will become a battleground.

Had the neutrals of the whole world, and particularly the world's greatest and most freedom-loving neutral, come immediately and spontaneously to the aid of Finland, the United States with generous financial help, and help without any strings attached to it—were the neutrals even yet to do so—it is possible that Finland might have fought her defensive battle against the Russians as a violated neutral without becoming implicated in the major war.

But not only are the small European neutrals scared. The United States is apparently, and for no reason clear to this column, scared, too. We still take the preposterous position that, seeing a child beset by a gangster, we offer to bind his wounds and give him food but refuse him a gun. So Finland remains, except for unofficial and totally inadequate aid, isolated and alone, facing the prospect of an international funeral at which the world's democratic statesmen will no doubt utter eulogies to her heroism and to her free and democratic mode of life. The democratic world is rapidly becoming a burial association.

MEANWHILE, however, there is the possibility of another form of action in aid of Finland—action against Russia by Great Britain's fleet in the far north, in the region of Murmansk and Petsamo. This is a highly unpleasant idea to the Russians, because they are now, as they always have been, miserably weak on the sea. And this possible action parallels possible British-French action in the Near East. And here, not only Germany and Russia, but also Italy are concerned.

Should Britain engage her navy in the north against Russia in behalf of Finland, Russia's recently concluded treaties with the small Baltic states—with Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania—would come to give Russia aid. This would be extremely unpleasant for the small Baltic states and not particularly attractive to Germany. Far better for Russia and Germany to achieve, through a negotiated peace, what they have wished all along: The inclusion of the whole Baltic and of all eastern European states from Finland to Greece in a Russian-German-Italian security bloc.

Peace now between Finland and Russia would mean that should Britain and France attempt to intervene against Russia in the far north, all the Baltic states, including Finland, would have to oppose the Allies on behalf of Russia. Since their combined armies number a million men or more this would be vastly more to the Soviet's advantage than conquest and occupation, which would not add man power to her forces, but subtract it.

The four small Baltic states would certainly not go to the aid of Soviet Russia against England and France with any enthusiasm, but they would do almost anything to avoid being made a battleground.

And with complete cynicism Soviet Russia, Nazi Germany and the small states themselves argue that if they were all included in a Russian security bloc, in which Russia demanded the protection of their "neutrality" (backed up by Germany and Italy), England and France would respect it!

IN FACT, England and France are fighting with their hands tied because their desire to respect the neutrality of small nations for whose future they are, among other things, fighting.

If ever virtue was not its own reward, it is in this war.

The Nazis have ruthlessly invaded and captured Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, and the Russians, if they bring Finland to her knees, have or will have put themselves in the most powerful strategical positions. They will, then, with Finland in their bloc, turn around and pose as the protectors of the neutrals.

Germany is not anxious to "take" Rumania. She is anxious now to preserve Rumania's "neutrality." And Italy plays this diplomatic game with Germany. With Finland gone, Soviet Russia, Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy will have only one program: To inclose in a common "security bloc" Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Slovakia, Hungary, Rumania, Jugoslavia, Albania, Bulgaria and even Greece, isolating Turkey.

The army of Gen. Weygand in the Near East will be deprived of any excuse for intervention the moment that Finland and Russia conclude peace, and when this happens the Nazis and the Communists will have won the major battle of the war in the East with the diplomatic aid of Mussolini and will be free to turn their attention more vigorously to the West.

Mussolini, I believe, will thoroughly sanction this action in the East, and, if it succeeds, will play the Russian-German diplomatic game in the West from then on. For Mussolini is going to play the game of whoever looks most like a winner. And if the German-Russian-Swedish "peace" move succeeds, it will be very bad news for the Western nations.

The renewed talk of the Nazis about the Mediterranean problem is significant. They are unrolling again axis ideas.

A SECURITY BLOC of the whole Eastern Europe, under the domination of Communist Russia and Nazi Germany, will make the two into a terrific menace for the West. Finland, a handful of people, fighting alone and unaided, holds the key position. If she is conquered or purchases the end of this horrible war by entering the security bloc, who can blame her? But the whole Western World, the whole of Western civilization, will eventually pay an immeasurably high price for her defeat. Whatever sum—were it 20 times anything proposed—that might be lent or given by us to Finland would be a drop in the ocean of what this country will spend for armaments in the next few years. And if we do not pay with many of our prized liberties, that, too, will be a miracle.

Never the temp'ramental
Star with the high hat on.

II.

Seein' the land from hoss cars,
Takin' 'em as they lay,
Beatin' the big and little,
Callin' it all a day;
Knowin' no airs or whimsies,
Showin' no social grace,
Merely a tough old hombre
Asking, "Well, when's the race?"

III.

Never a namby-pamby
Shunnin' the tough, stern test;
Ever the willin' runner
Givin' each time his best;
Scornin' the patient prep stuff,
Scornin' the hunt for "spots,"
Always around and willin',
Takin' the biggest pots.

IV.

Knowin' no dainty treatments,
Never a "powder puff;"

Eager to do his stuff;

VII.

Crippled at last, and done for . . .

Sales Tax Best for D.C., Citizens Told

Randolph Cites Probable Gains From Levy on City's Host of Transients

Chairman of the House District Committee Jennings Randolph last night declared himself in favor of a sales tax for the District at the second annual dinner of the American University Park Citizens Association at the Brighton Hotel. More than 300 persons attended.

"If there's one jurisdiction where an income tax will not work it's in the District of Columbia," he declared. Affirming his belief in the value of a sales tax, he said if this cannot be achieved, "a combination sales tax and income tax might be worked out" that would offset the "muddled" conditions arising from a straight income assessment.

Transients Would Contribute

One of the chief values of a sales tax would be the income derived from transient dwellers in Washington, he pointed out.

"Suffrage for the District is the foundation stone on which any reorganization must rest," said Representative Randolph. He pledged his support of suffrage in any plan for District reorganization coming before the House.

Stating that "over a period of years those fighting for the franchise may have failed to agree on one plan and follow it through to a successful conclusion," he said that concerted action on the part of Washington citizens associations and newspapers "may in time impress Congress."

He praised the democratic way of life. "The strength of any community rests with civic leaders who want not only to carve out their own lives, but want also to carve a future for their children in their community." There are approximately 270,000 citizens of Washington desiring a future in their community, but without a right to vote, he said.

The type of presentation of cases before District committees by Washington citizens is "on a high plane," he said.

Toastmaster at the dinner was James Maxwell, president of the association. Officers of other associations and the federation were among the guests. There was a dance following the dinner.

Northeast Conference

Long range planning for the gradual extension of public welfare facilities was urged last night by Robert E. Bondy, director of public welfare, before the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations at a meeting in St. Anthony's Parish Hall, Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast.

Bondy said inadequate facilities of the department's institutions, now under investigation by a Congressional subcommittee, result from many years of scanty appropriations.

"The Public Welfare Department services and plant have not kept pace with the growth of the District and human needs here," he said. "Our needs have been accumulating, and they have been under study for many years."

Recent publicity resulting from Mrs. Roosevelt's "surprise visits" to the Blue Plains Home for the Aged and other institutions have helped overcome the "lack of understanding of public welfare needs" among the public, he said.

George Cleary urged the 40 delegates at the meeting to back up the demand for increased welfare funds when hearings open on next year's budget. F. J. McDonald also spoke. A. D. Calvert, president of the conference and delegate from the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, presided.

Connecticut Avenue

The Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution requesting that the zoning commission grant a rehearing on the zoning of the area in the vicinity of the Janney School, Albermarle street and Wisconsin avenue northwest.

The work of Thomas E. Lodge on the Alcoholic Beverage Board was indorsed by the association. A resolution was adopted opposing a bill whereby the Board of Education might grant a work permit to a minor under 18 years of age who wished to appear in a theatrical production. The association attacked the position of Harry S. Wender, first vice president of the Federation, who testified before a House subcommittee that he was willing to exchange Federal contributions to the District for suffrage.

Sparrel A. Wood, president of the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights, discussed property covenants in Washington. Troop 8 of the Boy Scouts gave a demonstration of its work.

Increase to 50,000 Watts Jolts WJSV Into the News

The switch that threw 50,000 watts over to Radio Station WJSV, making it the most powerful broadcaster in Washington, was presented to Commissioner Hazen (right, above), by General Manager A. D. Willard, jr., last night at the National Press Club. The power increase seemed to throw more action into Arch McDonald (dressed as a rookie Nat) and John Charles Daly, who appeared as his manager, in a radio skit

Senator Says Faith Is Vital To Civilization

Josh Lee Addresses First Baptist Church On Anniversary

Christianity is fundamental to democracy and to the progress of civilization, Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, declared at last night's 138th anniversary dinner of First Baptist Church.

The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Kensuke Horinouchi, legislators, church leaders and others heard the speaker advise that democracy is not just an institution in America by accident. It exists here, he said, because religion came with the first settlers to this country.

"The great men who put their stamp on this Government got their inspiration from the fountain-head of the church," reminded the legislator, who was unanimously elected an associate member of the First Baptist Church following his address. He holds his membership in the First Baptist Church, Oklahoma City.

Earlier, Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, announced that he and Dr. W. O. Lewis, executive secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, today would draft a letter to the Rumanian government expressing appreciation for granting religious freedom to the Baptists there. The edict closing Baptist churches there was recently lifted.

E. Hilton Jackson, chairman of the board of trustees of the church, was toastmaster.

Five women whose length of membership at First Baptist Church totals 288 years were given a big ovation at the dinner. They were Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkin, Mrs. Harry C. Pearson, Miss Ivy M. Dickinson, Miss Mary E. Cunningham and Miss Flora Nichols. They have been connected with the church for 52, 64, 50, 67, and 55 years, respectively.

Moderator Heard

"Mahatma Ghandi's power is overestimated. The Indian people will not revolt. They will remain loyal to Great Britain at least until the end of the war."

This was the opinion of Dr. Sam Higginbottom, moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, who for 35 years was a missionary in India.

Here on his first visit to Washington since his election as moderator last May, Dr. Higginbottom spoke last night at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. He was guest of the Rev. Albert J. McCartney, who was his chief competitor for the post of moderator in the 1939 election.

Dr. Rasmussen Speaks

Guarantee of the Christian Church's future rests upon the extension of youth religious educational facilities, Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen declared here last night.

Today's young people are getting only a "smattering" of religious education, most of it confined to an hour on Sunday, he reminded at the annual teachers-officers' dinner of the District of Columbia Sunday School Association at Lewis Memorial Methodist Church.

Dr. Charles E. Resser, president of the association and paleontologist of the Smithsonian Institution, presided.

Allen Seeks 'Better Place' At Blue Plains

Convalescent Home At Gallinger Also Included in Plan

Plans to make the Home for Aged and Infirm a "better place to live," to transfer inmates in need of hospital or other institutional care and to build a convalescent home at Gallinger Hospital were formulated yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen and his welfare and medical advisers.

An outgrowth of the health report on the Blue Plains institution, the program was worked out by Robert E. Bondy, welfare director; Health Officer George C. Ruhland; Dr. Edward A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital; Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the District Training School at Laurel, Md.; Dr. Albert J. Sullivan, Gallinger physician who conducted the survey of Blue Plains, and Commissioner Allen.

WPA Nurses Proposed

Allen, following the program, will await a comprehensive plan, including money needed, to improve the physical plant at Blue Plains, to increase the present staff, and for general improvements of the institution, from the Board of Public Welfare. This report, which will be submitted within a week by Bondy, will receive the backing of the Commissioner.

An attempt will be made to inaugurate a WPA nursing program, as is now operated at Gallinger Hospital, for the Blue Plains institution. It is estimated that some 15 to 20 nurses would be employed on this project.

Funds to build a convalescent home on Gallinger Hospital grounds to take care of those at Blue Plains and other District institutions who need this type of attention will be proposed.

The report listed 90 inmates who should be transferred to other institutions.

Allen assured the welfare head he would do everything in his power to get Congress to appropriate funds in accordance with the Board of Public Welfare's recommendations.

Committee on Tour

The House subcommittee on District appropriations yesterday began its tour of local welfare institutions in anticipation of executive hearings on the District supply bill next week.

Accompanied by Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, the subcommittee visited the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, the Children's Receiving Home and the Industrial Home School. The members looked at the exterior of the Industrial Home School for Colored Children but did not enter it.

The tour will be resumed at 9:30 o'clock this morning, led by Chairman Millard Caldwell (Democrat), of Florida.

WJSV, With 50,000 Watts, Becomes Area's Strongest

Distinguished Guests Witness Official Switch-Over to Transmitter Using Highest Power Allowed by FCC

Radio Station WJSV, with a power increase to 50,000 watts, became the strongest broadcasting station in the Washington area last night.

Although the switchover was was made at 6:15 a. m. yesterday, the power change was officially inaugurated with a special broadcast from 10:15 to 11 p. m. in the National Press Club auditorium.

Municipal, civic and Federal leaders took part in the dedicatory ceremonies. A. D. Willard, jr., general manager of WJSV, presented to Commissioner Hazen the switch which actually turned on the new power.

"This," said Willard, reading from an inscription on the switch's marble base, "is a symbol of WJSV's perpetual readiness to serve the community."

WJSV, with its $300,000 transmitter at Wheaton, Md., took its place among 39 other stations in the country which broadcast on 50,000 watts, the maximum permitted by the FCC.

The program last night was devoted principally to entertainment. Radio listeners heard that "Columbia's Station for the Nation's Capital" was now the most powerful in this vicinity and then settled back to enjoy a 45-minute show.

On hand to liven up the proceedings was Bob Trout, Columbia's ace New York announcer and former "Presidential" announcer at WJSV; John Charles Daly, local "special events" man; Professor Quiz, Jane Froman, Arthur Godfrey, Arch McDonald, Garry Stevens and Paul Kain's Orchestra.

After the program, guests adjourned across the street to the Willard Hotel for a buffet supper.

Among distinguished guests who were at the Press Club to give WJSV a send-off were:

Senator Capper, Kansas; Senator and Mrs. Mead, New York; Senator and Mrs. O'Mahoney, Wyoming; Senate Majority Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, and Mrs. Barkley; Representative and Mrs. Randolph, West Virginia, Representative and Mrs. Allen, Pennsylvania; Representative Martin, House Minority Leader; Representative Rogers, Massachusetts.

Commissioner and Mrs. George E. Allen, Commissioner and Mrs. David McCoach, jr., Commander T. A. M. Craven, of the Federal Communications Commission; Lieut. E. K. Jett, chief engineer of the FCC, and Mrs. Jett; Thomas J. Slowie, FCC secretary, and Mrs. Slowie; Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, and Mrs. Miller.

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post; Col. Edmund Starling, chief of the White House staff of the Secret Service, and Mrs. Starling; W. A. Van Duzer, director of Vehicles and Traffic, and Mrs. Van Duzer; Frank Russell, National Broadcasting Co. vice president in Washington; Kenneth Berkley, general manager, WRC-WMAL, and Mrs. Berkley; Carlton Smith, manager of WMAL, and Mrs. Smith; Dr. John Studebaker, Commissioner of Education; Harry C. Butcher, Columbia Broadcasting System vice president in Washington, and Mrs. Butcher; A. D. Willard, jr., general manager, WJSV, and Mrs. Willard; E. K. Cohan, director of engineering, Columbia Broadcasting System; A. B. Chamberlain, chief engineer, Columbia Broadcasting System; A. Unsafe, Hall At Ketcham Is Closed

Auditorium Used For Many Meetings Declared a Peril By D. C. Engineer

A third-floor room at the Ketcham Elementary School, Fifteenth street and Good Hope road southeast, converted into an assembly hall many years ago, has been closed and declared unsafe for such use, The Post learned last night.

Discovery that the auditorium on the top floor of the school was not constructed to bear with safety the weight of parent, teacher and student assemblies, was made a week ago.

It was made by inspectors from the office of Capt. John L. Person, assistant District engineer commissioner, during an examination preparatory to drafting plans for remodeling the 26-year-old structure.

Capt. Person said the room originally was intended for use as a storeroom. He said its use as an auditorium was "crowding the factor of safety" to the point where there was danger of collapse.

Joists Strained

Strains to which the joist structure had been put, he said, was "way beyond the safety load."

The inspectors' findings, Capt. Person said, were made known to school authorities in a letter from him which also pointed out fire hazards in an auditorium on the top floor of the building.

Closing of the assembly hall was brought to the attention of The Post by Mrs. William J. Plemmons, publicity chairman of the Ketcham-Van Buren Parent-Teacher Association. She said the auditorium was accessible to the second floor by stairs at each end of the building, but that fire escapes could not be reached from it because there are no windows.

There are several openings to the outside, she said, but these are only for admission of light.

Used 12 Years

The room had been used as an auditorium for at least 12 years, she said. School assemblies, Parent-Teacher Association meetings and graduations were held there. The auditorium had a capacity of about 300, and Mrs. Plemmons recalled several occasions when "we were packed in there like sardines."

Both the Ketcham School and Van Buren Elementary, 1318 W street southeast, with a total population of over 400, used the hall.

Money became available last July for building an eight-room addition and auditorium at the Ketcham school. School authorities said the new building would not be ready before next November, but that the work of rehabilitating the old building would be finished before the start of the next school term.

Women's Cries Drive Prowler From Home

Another's Screams Frighten Off Man Who Grabs at Purse

Two women drove off marauders with screams last night while police chalked up another zero as the result of a lineup of 22 white holdup and robbery suspects at headquarters.

Miss Mae McLaughlin, 18, frightened away a colored man she said was 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighed 200 pounds who entered her home at 907 Third street northeast. She told police she was on the second floor with a sister and saw the man advancing up the stairs with outstretched hands when she started down to investigate a noise on the first floor.

Policeman Found

Running to a front bedroom, she and her sister broke out a window opening on a porch. She screamed for help while her sister called to the intruder, "police are coming." When Pvt. David R. Thompson, on extra duty, responded from a block and a half away the man had fled.

Darilla Bickings, of 1324 F street northeast, fought off three youths who attempted to snatch her pocketbook in the 1000 block of D street northeast. They fled when she emitted several screams.

William A. Baumbach, of 1205 Forty-fourth place southeast, reported the theft of five rings valued at $400 from his home.

Auto Parts Recovered

Auto parts valued at $744.20 were recovered and two colored men were arrested when, police said, they endeavored to sell the parts to a junk shop at New Jersey avenue and N street southeast yesterday. The parts were stolen early yesterday from a parking lot at 1246 First street southeast.

Meanwhile, high police and school officials conferred yesterday at Franklin School on a projected drive against young vandals and sneak thieves, who, last year, destroyed $20,000 worth of school property. At the same time, Walter E. Kern, District electrical engineer, appealed to police for aid in combating wanton destruction of street lights and electric signs, which, he estimated, would cost the city $35,000 this year.

Appeals Court Revises Opinion

The District Court of Appeals yesterday revised the opinion by which last week it set aside the death sentence of William F. Johnson, 22, colored, for first-degree murder.

The court's opinion had described two attorneys who were assigned to defend Johnson in the District Court as "young members of the bar with little, if any, experience." The court in an order eliminated this reference to the supposed inexperience of the attorneys. No reason was given for the deletion.

Job Board Adopts Texas Rating Plan

System Rewards Employers Who Keep Stable Level Of Employment

The District Unemployment Compensation Board yesterday adopted an employer's experience rating plan as outlined by the Washington Board of Trade in preference to a plan in operation in Connecticut.

One minor change, explained by Commissioner David McCoach, jr., as a "refinement," was made in the trade body's plan, which is based on the Texas merit system.

The board will recommend this plan to the District Commissioners for inclusion in their report on the proposed amendments to the District Unemployment Insurance Act, introduced in the House by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi. This report will be sent to the Budget Bureau some time next week.

As explained by the Board of Trade the rating plan "must be regarded as a method of assessing responsibility for unemployment at the place it belongs, and as a method for measuring the employer's experience with unemployment among his workers."

If an employer maintains stability in employment, he would pay a reduced pay-roll tax to the unemployment fund. The plan would permit the payment of a tax between ½ of 1 per cent and 2.7 per cent, depending on the employer's rating. The present pay-roll tax is a flat 3 per cent.

Yesterday three of the five members of the D. U. C. B. met to decide on a merit plan, having before it the Board of Trade's proposal and one from Connecticut. Present were Col. McCoach, Daniel J. Callahan and John Locher, members of the board; John A. Marshall, executive director of the board, and Corporation Counsel Seal, who will draft the Commissioners' report on the McGehee bill. Their recommendation will be sent to the Commissioners, who make up the rest of the D. U. C. B.

Mass Honors Patron Saint At Catholic U.

An instrument for the world's salvation is embodied in the teachings of St. Thomas Aquinas, Dr. Joseph C. Fenton said at yesterday's solemn high mass commemorating the feast day of that patron saint of Catholic schools.

"Pius XII has pointed out that the great evils of our day and of our county are those which stem from an improper concept of God and of the revealed teaching which the Catholic Church proposes to the world," declared the Catholic University faculty member, speaking in the crypt of the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at the university.

Faith Needed For Success, Pastor Asserts

Only through the Christian faith is humanity able to face life with courage and success, the Rev. Edward G. Latch told worshipers yesterday at the Penn Theater.

Addressing the daily noonday Lenten rites of Southeast Protestant congregations, the Chevy Chase Methodist pastor insisted Christianity can never be said to be really effective until it actually transforms the lives of individuals. That, in the last analysis, is the basic test of Christianity, he pointed out.

The Rev. Mr. Latch, introduced by the Rev. Bernard I. Barnes, pastor of North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, last night was host pastor to the union services of Chevy Chase Protestant churches. The Rev. George D. Heaton, of Lynchburg, Va., was guest preacher.

Epiphany Episcopal Church, where Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo will close his week's series of Lenten addresses today at noon, during the coming week will welcome the Right Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, D.D., Bishop of Albany, N. Y., preaching Monday through Friday at 12:05 p. m.

54 Lights to Guard Thomas Circle Walkers

When the new Thomas Circle underpass is opened March 13 and the traffic and pedestrian lights are turned on, walkers will be safer than a duck in a tub of water, says Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

Reports that 98 signals will stud the circle were corrected by the traffic chief.

"There will be 54," he said, 16 for vehicles and 38 for pedestrians.

A system of "channelized" traffic will grace the new circle layout, which means pedestrians will make crossings by progressive steps from safety island to safety island.

Miss Rainer's American Stage Debut Approaches

Will Star in Shaw's 'Saint Joan' Sunday; Two Pinch-Hitters Bat an Even 1,000; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IT IS A GENEROUS and a graceful gesture that Luise Rainer is making in the direction of her newly acquired American citizenship.

It is pretty well known by now—or should be—that Miss Rainer, disengaged from contractural commitments in pictures on the West Coast or the stage on the East, decided to do something for the Red Cross. That something was a voluntary and gratuitous appearance in the title role of Shaw's "Saint Joan" for a week, beginning Sunday night, in the Belasco Theater, with the Washington Civic Theater's acting group comprising her support. It was an heroic undertaking that crept up on the dimensions of the Gargantuan.

BELL

In some quarters, overemphasis has been laid upon the emotional moments that inevitably occur when talented and temperamental artists launch so pretentions an enterprise. One suspects, for example, that Miss Rainer was a little chagrined when she discovered that the Civic Theater is not a handsomely endowed organization devoting its whole time to the theater, as "Civic" theaters so generally are in European capitals. Other discouraging things bobbed up, too. So it is all the more to the credit of all concerned that the production of "Saint Joan," the finest play Shaw ever wrote, has progressed indefatigably to the promise of a fine achievement.

From sources that I deem wholly reliable, I am apprised that when "Saint Joan" opens Sunday night, Washington will view a production and acting ensemble that will do ample justice to a play that has enlisted the interest of the foremost stars of the stage on two continents. It will be a happy consummation of a period of mildly turbulent and exceedingly trying preparation. The Capital owes a salute to this indomitable demonstration of the true spirit of the theater.

It has been stated here before, I think, that Miss Rainer—two-time Academy Award winner on the screen—is no stranger to the title role of "Saint Joan." She has played the part on the other side in German. Furthermore, she was seen in a bit of the inquisition scene in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's only partially happy production of "Dramatic School." Obviously, she knows her way around in the role. But what does seem to have been overlooked is the fact that only recently the six-hundredth anniversary of the canonization of Jeanne D'Arc passed quietly by. How the "Saint Joan" publicists ever overlooked that one, I'll never know. They probably never will, either.

It's about time that some confirmed attention-caller pointed his finger at the fact that Washington theatergoers this week have the rare privilege of viewing a cast substitution that assays 100 per cent. This rarely happens. Usually, last-minute replacements in stellar roles is attended by results that are a pain in the neck. This is to say that Sid Marion and Cliff "Sharlie" Hall, in "The Streets of Paris," at the National this week, are every whit as good as Abbott and Costello. Maybe better. Sid and Cliff flu into the team comedy spots when Abbott and Costello flu out with the flu. A nice trick, if you can do it. Manager Eddie Plohn, of the National, reports capacity business for the remainder of the week as the most eloquent answer.

Another famous feud is wiped off the theatrical slate. Perhaps it was not a personal feud, but, at least, it was a bitter professional rivalry. In an earlier era in the theater, Lillian Russell, born Nellie Leonard, was the "toast of the town"—any town—as the most fabulous blonde dazzling the paying public. On the brunette side it was Maxine Elliott, born Dermot. The radiant Miss Russell has been gone these many years. This week the final curtain rang down on Miss Elliott on the Riviera. Their careers ran more or less parallel, but never crossed. Before Miss Elliott divorced him in 1908, the late Nat Goodwin, her then husband, was wont to remark that his wife was placed upon this earth long after her proper time. "She was born," said he, "to be a Roman Senator." The old order passeth.

When we mentioned Blanche Ring in these dispatches yesterday, the identification might have been made a trifle more complete. In private life, Miss Ring is the wife of Charlie Winninger, prevalent on the screens as one of the cinema's nimblest character comedians and remembered even more vividly as the Captain Andy in "Show Boat." The last time I talked with Charlie, he assured me that Blanche still is a top performer—although seen precious little of late. Her engagement by Universal to support Bing Crosby in his next picture seems to prove it.

That Lenore Coffee movie script of Howard Spring's best-seller, "My Son, My Son," came duly to hand—all 177 pages of it. It plays hob with many aspects of the original novel that seem to me important. At the same time, by concentrating on a single love story, involving father and son, it gives promise of being a romantic film of high voltage—if you can forget the book, or, by some good fortune, haven't read it.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 7.

DIPLOMACY: Stella Adler went to Washington on Monday, to entertain at the President's dinner to his Cabinet . . . Later, Miss Adler, Laurette Taylor, Eddie Dowling and the rest of the Broadway contingent were invited to supper at the White House. When Stella entered the dining room she didn't know where to sit—and said: "What's this? No place-card? No escort?" . . . "Whenever you come here," Cordell Hull advised, "don't start complaining right away, little lady."

AID: When the Allied Mission arrived this week, for the purpose of appeasing American complaints concerning mail-interference, etc., they refused to pose for the news-photographers . . . An amiable Frenchman, who was a passenger aboard the ship, volunteered to intercede, and induced the visitors to pose. "You see," he explained, "I used to be a newspaperman myself. My name is Rene Blum" . . . He really used to be a newspaperman. One of the purposes of his current visit is to help start a French publication here—with backing from his brother, former Premiere Leon Blum.

CHOICE: Jack Kirkland, author of the play, "Tobacco Road," returned from Hollywood after rejecting a fabulous offer for the movie rights. Although the price—a record breaking figure—was satisfactory, the deal failed to be negotiated because Kirkland demanded a clause deferring the movie release for at least two years. The New York company and the road companies still are profitable ventures, whose life would be terminated by any movie release. . . . "I'd rather have $100 a week for life," Kirkland explained, "than a million dollars tomorrow."

SOLUTION: All the lights in Hollywood went out last week, because of a faulty powerline from Boulder Dam. During a press-showing of "The Road to Singapore," in a Paramount projection room, the lights suddenly went out and the audience remained in darkness for half an hour . . . The pressmen in charge of the showing then arose with great disgust and told the guests: "The hell with it. Crosby gets the girl—and let's go home."

CHALLENGE: When a large number of Presidential aspirants assembled at the National Press Club last week, Leon Henderson, the New Deal economist offered to bet $5 that the next President of the United States was not sitting on the dais. Thomas E. Dewey told Henderson: "That's because you're prejudiced in favor of another candidate" . . . Franklin D. Roosevelt was away vacationing but McNutt, Wheeler, Vandenberg and many others were on that dais . . . "No, it's just that I'm a mathematician and statistician," Henderson assured Dewey. "And this is my own money. Is it a bet?" . . . There were no takers.

CHATTER: Gene Tunney was a patient at Doctors' Hospital over the week-end, and was discharged Wednesday . . . Ed Wynn is auditioning Floria Vestoff and Jackie Gleason, of the 18 Club, for roles in his new show . . . Night-club business dropped to a new low last week . . . Mrs. Clarence Day evidenced her New England thriftiness by demanding that the waste food used in "Life With Father" be converted into pudding or hash, and then given away . . . Alfred Friendly, the newspaperman now with The Washington Post, will be named as assistant to Willard Thorpe, in the trusteeship of the defunct Associated Gas & Electric Corporation.

ENTERPRISE: Because Clifford Odets' "Night Music" will close on Saturday night, at least two members of the cast are accepting the inevitable, and will go to Hollywood . . . "But as for me, I love the theater too much," Philip Loeb protested to his Group Theater associates. "I am adamant. Believe me, I will not go to Hollywood—until I get an offer."

ART: Prince Serge Obolensky recently was host to Sorin, the Russian painter. During the revolution, when Obolensky was wounded while fighting for the White Russians and had to retire behind the lines until he recovered, Sorin saw him and pleaded to paint his portrait . . . "You represent an aristocracy which is dying or being killed off," Sorin explained. "As an artist, I feel that I must paint you. It will be a historic canvas, because you represent the last remnant of a vanishing class" . . . Obolensky posed, and years later recovered possession of that portrait, which was torn by bullets. The Reds, hunting for Obolensky, had no picture of him—and so that painting had been placed on a bulletin-board in Petrograd, under a sign: "Wanted, Dead or Alive."

BENEFIT:—Margot Graham, the actress who married the millionaire MacMartin family, will go to Bermuda for a vacation shortly. In preparation for her trip, she went to the Brooks Costume Co., and ordered a copy of one of the gowns—complete with all petticoats—worn by Vivien Leigh in "Gone With the Wind" . . . The gown and each petticoat will be sold, at a Bermuda benefit show, at auction—directly off Miss Graham's body.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 7.

"Too Many Husbands" is more than a picture title these days. If insurance companies kept statistics on 'em, the last things in the world they'd insure would be bachelors! Take a look at last year's record: Eligible bachelors copped off were: Robert Taylor, Adrian, Gene Markey, Clark Gable, Ty Power, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Wayne Morris, Jon Hall and Louis Hayward. That's quite a record, but to add to that in the winter just past of '39-'40 there was Walter Wanger, William Powell, Brian Aherne and Bill Hopper. Then, of course, there's always Artie Shaw and Lana Turner. The more or less "steadies" include Norma Shearer-George Raft, Richard Greene-Virginia Field.

HOPPER

Which brings us to the point of the Hollywood hostesses—that we have too many husbands and too few eligible bachelors. Why, the bachelors are snapped up before they've had a chance to cool off from their last romance. Jimmy Stewart somehow manages to maintain his middle-of-the-road attitude (though Heaven knows how!) ditto George Brent. Yep—there's a man-famine here.

And anytime a 6-footer with a bit of charm and something akin to a decent background shows up on the Hollywood scene, the world's prettiest girls are like to pounce (to borrow Scarlett O'Hara's phrase) "like a duck on a junebug."

Maybe it's coincidental, but a very eligible bachelor directed and produced a picture called, of all things, "Too Many Husbands." . . . And now, along comes Leap Year.

Quite a commentary on "What Price Beauty" in Hollywood—and eye-opening, too. For Jackie Cooper's "Seventeen," as you know, 17 17-year-old girls were brought here from as many cities, to help advertise the picture. Used to be, whenever there was a beauty parade or a pageant anywhere, talent scouts were sent out and tried to corral some of the beauties, with no question as to whether or not they could act, had any ability or background. Beauty was enough. But that day's gone. Can it be that beauty is passe?

If you'll stop a moment and analyze our Hollywood stars, you'll discover few of them could be called beautiful. "Beauty attracts, but does not hold" still holds in Hollywood and more important, the box office.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 7 (INS).—There has been a notable absence of period and costumed characters in Frank Capra's best money-sellers. The Capra plays are famous for touching on current topics and subtly presenting a sociological trend, but they have always been modern. Maybe that's why he's decided to do something entirely different after he finishes "The Life and Death of John Doe." He and Robert Riskin are writing "The Life of William Shakespeare." They have also prepared a script on "Don Quixote" and both of these will be on the Capra program.

LOUELLA PARSONS

"Destry Rides Again" was a box office riot for Universal and they're going Western again in a great big way with "When the Daltons Rode." The Daltons, in their day, out-Jesse Jamesed Tyrone Power himself, terrorizing a former generation with their train robbing exploits.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Ray Millands welcomed a boy today. Ray had expected a girl and had chosen the name Victoria. Well, Victor will do as well; Olivia de Havilland and Lew Ayres a most surprising twosome dining quietly tete-a-tete; Penny (Blondie) Singleton and her producer, Bob Sparks, together again at the "My Son, My Son" preview. Greg Bautzer with young Margaret Roach—and very attentive, too; Sinclair Lewis has taken himself to Victorville to write a play; Letitia Fairbanks and Reginald Gardiner a ciro two-some following the preview; Jane Winton and Michael Gottlieb, her bridegroom, guests of honor at a large party. Jane has been much wined and dined and herself gave a farewell party last night.

Sonja Henie and Dan Topping, chaperoned by her brother and his wife, at the El Mirador in Palm Springs. This is the most serious of Sonja's romances, if I am any judge; Alec Templeton imitating Charlie McCarthy's voice so well that Edgar Bergen, who was lunching with him at the Brown Derby, was astonished; Patricia Dane and Rudy Vallee have definitely said farewell.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

'Vigil in Night' to Be Kept A Second Week at Keith's

Unrelieved gloom seems to have caught on surpassing well at R.-K.-O.-Keiths. The Fifteenth street theater is continuing Carole Lombard's dramatic venture, "Vigil in the Night," for a second week.

"Vigil in the Night" is adapted from a novel by A. J. Cronin, a steady condemnation of hospital politics which served the doctor-author so well in "The Citadel." For this treatment, Dr. Cronin has focused one's attention upon the feminine side of the problem, upon a duty-bound nurse and her selfish young sister.

It is because this young girl is so little worth her sacrificing sister's self-denial that the film becomes a pretty dreary adventure of unhappiness after unhappiness. It all began when the younger girl allowed a youthful patient to die through her wanton carelessness and Miss Lombard's brave sister Anne took the rap for her. To be sure, Miss Lombard's nurse did come across Brian Aherne's solemn Dr. Prescott in the course of what followed. In some of the nurses' eyes, that is the fruit of the Lombard labors.

Miss Lombard's nurse never cracks a grin, a lapse that is startling in the usually merry blonde star. Miss Shirley's portrayal of the youthful sister is more than pretty, little less than convincing. Aherne's doctor has little to do than look noble.

The Federal Diary:

Agencies Find Budget Hard To Balance

Abolition of U. S. Bureaus Would Save But 12%, They Say

By Alfred Friendly

Two analyses by Federal agencies of recent national budgets indicate the impossibility of budget balancing by the widely publicized device of "getting rid of all these unnecessary Government bureaus and employes."

By firing every last Federal worker except the men and officers of the Army and Navy and employes of the Postoffice, which is within 5 per cent of being self-supporting—the $9,000,000,000 budget would be shaved by not more than 10 per cent, the studies estimate. If other administrative expenses, such as office rent, travel costs, telephones, equipment, etc., are added, the figure may rise as high as about 12 per cent.

One study, made by Commerce Department economists and published in the February issue of the Survey of Current Business, indicates that the total of all administrative expenses of the Government during the calendar year 1939 is less than $1,000,000,000. The second analysis, now in the works at the Civil Service Commission, indicates that wage items of all Federal employes are less than 10 per cent of all the money the Government spent during the fiscal year 1939.

Expenses Analyzed

Neither study would imply that savings, in terms of millions of dollars, cannot be made by curtailing certain Federal agencies, but both demonstrate that the problem of balancing the budget is by no means solved by merely lopping Government workers off the pay roll.

The significant factors in the budget, the Commerce Department study shows, are not the expenses of running the departments, but items for work programs and relief, agricultural programs, public works, national defense and retirements, pensions and assistance expenditures. Each of these categories is larger than the departmental cost item.

Gordon W. McBride is a very helpful gentleman who has just come to The Diary's aid by giving the answer to the brick problem, recently complained of here.

Genesis of the trouble was a U. S. Housing Authority release saying that more than 1,000,000,000 bricks had been used in the slum-clearance program, an amount sufficient to build "a high wall" across the continent. Our question was, "How high?"

By a deft bit of mathematics which does honor to McBride's teacher in grade 7-A, and a profound knowledge of brick-laying that is already bringing A. F. L. building trades unionists flocking to his door, McBride proves that the wall would be about 14 feet high. This assumes, however, that the wall was built without mortar and is only 2 inches wide, with the bricks laid on their edges.

McBride admits that the estimate of the wall is without foundation and is not union made. All in all, it seems to us to be a very unsatisfactory wall, liable to topple in a high wind, unaesthetic, monotonous and of no particular purpose. As a matter of fact, we think it is an unconscionable waste of money and the USHA ought to be thoroughly ashamed of itself. What Congressional authorization has it to go building walls across country? We foresee a Congressional investigation and a strong possibility that Administrator Strauss is going to catch it in the neck.

Furthermore, we like McBride's suggestion that the wall might be built with all the bricks laid flat on the ground, thus constituting a wall 14 feet wide and 2 inches high. Swell for hop-scotch.

Former President Of Two Colleges Expires in Sleep

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—Dr. John H. Finley, educator and editor emeritus of the New York Times, died in his sleep today.

Dr. Finley, who was 76, recently underwent an operation for hernia in the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, but his rugged physique apparently brought about a quick recovery.

He returned to his home at 1 Lexington avenue about three weeks ago. It was there he died.

His death was a surprise to members of his household and his physician. A nurse had gone to his room regularly and noted his respiration. When she entered at 7 a. m., she found him dead.

Native of Illinois

Dr. Finley, a native of Grand Ridge, Ill., was a former New York State commissioner of education and at one time was president of the College of the City of New York, as well as of Knox College, at Galesburg, Ill. He was the fifth college president in his family.

His father, grandfather and great-grandfather were farmers. He acquired his liking for journalism at Knox and earned most of his way by "sticking type" in a Galesburg newspaper plant.

He won the Illinois State oratorical contest in 1886 and a nine-State tournament the following year.

After graduation from Knox in 1887 he entered Johns Hopkins University, studying history, economics and politics.

In 1891 he was elected president of Knox and directed the college for seven years, while continuing his work as editor of the Charities Review, a magazine he had founded for the State Charities Aid Association in New York.

Edited Harper's

He left Knox to take an editorial job with the S. S. McClure Co. in New York and edited Harper's Weekly. After a year he went to Princeton as first occupant of a new chair in politics. He taught there until 1903 when he was elected president of City College.

Ten years later Dr. Finley was chosen State education commissioner. He held that post until January 1, 1921, when he joined the editorial staff of the New York Times, of which he became editor-in-chief in 1937.

In the autumn of 1910, Dr. Finley was Hyde lecturer at the Sorbonne in Paris. In the winter of 1911, he lectured at French provincial universities. He conducted courses at the University of North Carolina in 1922, at the University of Virginia in 1924, the University of Edinburgh in 1929, for the American Academy of Arts and Letters in 1930, and before the Pacific School of Religion in 1931.

Dr. Finley was married June 19, 1892, to Martha Ford Boyden, of Shefield, Ill. They had two sons and two daughters.

Farm Hand Kills Girl and Self

Mansfield, Ohio, March 7 (AP).—Nine-year-old Marjorie Gamble, taken by pretext from her schoolroom today, was shot and killed in her own home by a man who turned the gun on himself.

Sheriff E. P. Long, of Richland County, said the slaying occurred while the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Gamble, left their farm at nearby Lexington for a shopping trip to Mansfield.

Her body was found on a bed in the room of Theodore Smith, 27-year-old farmhand employed by Gamble. Smith's body, a bullet hole in the forehead, was found in the living room. The girl was shot in the breast.

Smith's room was in disarray and most of the girl's clothing had been torn from her body. Coroner Hugh C. Winbigler said apparently the man attempted to assault the child, but she was able to fight off his advances.

Finns Like Their Coffee, Drank 27,968,355 Pounds of It One Year

Benefit Is Arranged For Embattled People

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

A FINNISH food custom is to serve coffee at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. But it is not served in the living room as in the United States at tea time and the cocktail hour. The Finnish hostess serves her coffee and cakes at the dining room table where she presides over the coffee service.

Martha Ellyn

That Finland is a coffee drinking nation is shown by the large amount consumed. In 1921 Finland imported 27,968,355 pounds of coffee and consumed every bit of that vast amount. That was 8.25 pounds per capita. Finland along with the other Scandinavian countries adapted the French form "cafe" for coffee. A name coincident with one very familiar to Washington people is the first real adaptation of the Oriental coffee-house, the "Cafe Procope," which appeared in Paris in 1689, as that is the name of the well-known Finnish Minister, Hjalmar J. Procope.

"Finnish Coffee" Planned

In the interest of Finnish Civilian Relief, a Finnish Coffee is to be held at the Y. W. C. A. at Seventeenth and K streets, tomorrow from 4 to 7 o'clock. The idea originated with Mrs. Henry Trendley Dean and is being sponsored by the Professional Writers Club with Mrs. Dean as chairman. This party is to be definitely Finnish in atmosphere with music by Reino Luoma, the well-known Finnish pianist who is known especially for the concerts where he has played the works of Jean Sibelius, among which is the Sibelius composition, "Finlandia."

Among the cakes to be served with the coffee at this gathering for Finnish relief will be Finnish coffee ring and rector's gingerbread sent by Mme. Solanko, wife of Risto Solanko, secretary of the Finnish Legation. This is to be baked by Mme. Solanko's capable Finnish maid, Kerttu. Mme. Solanko has given me the recipe for making the Finnish coffee ring.

Finnish Coffee Ring

To ¼ cup sugar, ¾ teaspoon salt and 6 tablespoons shortening, add 1 cup scalded milk. When lukewarm add 1 yeast cake softened in ¼ cup warm water. Add 2 cups of flour and beat well. Let rise until very light. When light add 1 egg and 2 more cups of flour and beat well. Let rise. Divide the dough into 2 parts and shape each in a long, round piece and form two circles, placing the circles on a baking-tin. Brush with the white of egg and sprinkle with finely chopped almonds, sugar and cinnamon. With a large pair of scissors cut toward the center of the ring, but not quite to the center, at intervals of 2 inches, placing the cut section each time flat on the tin, giving it petal-like appearance. When light, bake in a hot oven of 400 degrees.

Hot Tamales Good to Have In Box Supper

Dancer Will Take Spanish Delicacy To Refugee Benefit

Box-suppers have, in years gone by, been an institution where romance or disillusion as to partner and delight or disappointment as to food have all played their part. A benefit box-supper will be given for Spanish refugees at the National Press Club Auditorium, on March 12, at the supper hour. This party is to follow the custom of bringing food in a shoe box, but the boxes will not necessarily be decorated with ribbons, hearts and other ornamentations as in past days. The former custom of putting the name of the person who packed the box inside so that the person giving the highest bid would know with whom he would eat is not to be followed generally.

However, there will be a small number of suppers put up for auction by some of the guests and sponsors of the supper. Mrs. Prentice Cooley, will auction her box and it will contain a typical French menu, a bottle of French wine included. Adalita, a Spanish dancer at a local restaurant who is to sing at the supper, is preparing a box-supper that will contain tamales and a Spanish salad.

If you are interested in making tamales to put in a shoe box to take to the Spanish party—or any other—an American version is given as follows:

Hot Tamales

For the meat ingredients use a 5-pound hen, boiled with 2 onions and seasonings to make a rich broth, and 1½ pounds of chuck steak, boiled tender with salt, pepper and 2 garlic cloves. Shred the white meat of chicken. Grind rest of chicken with cooked beef. Add 1 large bottle tomato catsup, cayene pepper, polvo para mole (can be bought at Spanish stores, or chili powder can be used as a substitute), and salt and pepper. Strain broths together. Bring to boiling point and stir in yellow corn meal until a very thick mush is formed. Cook 20 minutes. Have ready husks of green corn. Since only dried husk are available in winter they are softened in warm water before using. Dried husks are sold in Spanish stores. Flatten out husk and spread thick with corn meal. Lay a thick line of ground meat and some shredded chicken down middle. Put a stuffed olive in center. Roll and tie up tight at both ends. They should be about 1½ inches thick. Cut off superfluous cornhusks at ends. Place in a steamer. Steam 1 hour and serve very hot. Cut strings before serving.

A Sophisticated Note

Ripe olives in pitted form give a sophisticated note to the most homespun salads and are easily prepared. A hand operated cherry pitter of the plunger type removes the pit easily. Such pitters are inexpensive and may usually be found at the 10-cent stores. Use small ripe olives only and place the stem end of the fruit directly under the plunger. Slice for salad use or stuff for relish or as salad or sandwich garnish.

Light Economy

If you want to cut your light bills, have the room papered in light colored paper and have light woodwork.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Long-Distance Pair Appear to Be Happy In Small Apartment

New York, March 7.

ALONG with our homicides and colorful schemery, our town has its love stories, too, and one of the latest and nicest involves Donald Richon and Doris Johnson, just recently made Mr. and Mrs. This romance got a bit of attention a few years ago, when Donald, then in college, telephoned his sweetie-lamb in Brussels, where she was studying art. His papa balked at coughing up the $44.50, so his blood brothers of good old Phi Gamma Delta managed to raise the scratch in the sacred name of love. A very pretty tale, too.

HUGHES

Now they are securely wedded and have set up domestic shop in a small apartment, three flights up, out in Flushing, Long Island. The bride has been busy hanging drapes and curtains, busting the usual finger nails in the process and stopping long enough to tell the demon press what goes on with the Richons. Mrs. Doris says that her helpmate still gets some ribbing about the Brussels phone call, but that it is now such old stuff that the ribs roll off his back. She is happy that they got most of their furniture even to pictures as wedding presents, for the kids aren't exactly rolling in the stuff.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, Katie Hepburn is in the home stretch of her long run here in Phil Barry's bright comedy, "The Philadelphia Story," and a right good show it is. It will have played 416 performances, or almost precisely a full year—a theatrical phenomenon, these days. Kate the Great is a forthright, explosive and sometimes difficult personality—especially to reporters, most of whom hated her bitterly—but she's a fine actress and something delightful to look at, too. She's going to play the same role in the movie version, come summer.

Speaking of Hepburns, her younger sister Margaret, or Peggy, is just about the cutest girl east of the Rockies or west of Ambrose lightship.

Strong Colors Are Chic Now

Color is of greater importance at this time of year than at any other. So paint pot in hand, La Mode decided to do something about the pre-Easter color dirge. The buttons ornamenting the girl's suit, above, have been dyed by La Mode in exactly the same bright hue as her Botany flannel skirt, thus achieving a smart ensemble idea between mix-matched jackets and skirts. And these buttons, priced at less than a quarter apiece, can do wonders in giving old wardrobes a fresh, new look

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Mrs. Whiffle Swagg-Lilyfinger has taken a house in Adamtown and will entertain extensively during the Little Season. Mrs. Swagg-Lilyfinger is the former Leona Whiffle, daughter of the Carrington Whiffles, and is the mother of the devastating Mrs. Smythe-Steppit, of Newport. Her grandfather was Col. Archibald Whiffle. Her former husbands are J. Oliver Smythe, Artemus Steeplechase, Count Casabo, Mortimer Swagg and Andre Lilyfinger, the young artist whose works are exciting so much comment in New York.

Charity Ltd.

Mrs. Reginald D. F. Stuffer has withdrawn her name from the Committee to Buy Coal for Sufferers in War Devastated Regions. It is understood that Mrs. Stuffer objected to the committee's plan to sponsor a movie benefit to raise funds, insisting that a concert or art exhibit would be more dignified.

In a statement issued to the press, Mrs. Stuffer said, "While I heartily approve of the cause, yet I feel that the committee's methods of raising funds are a little radical. I have long made it a practice to permit my name to be connected only with the more conservative charitable activities."

Family Tradition

Sylvester Juniper, of Huckleberry Hall, has received the signal honor of being made Master of Fox Hounds for the Stagcrest Hunt. The Juniper name has long been famous in the Nation's annals. John Juniper, the original settler and founder of the family in this country, led several daring expeditions against the Indians; William Juniper was a noted hero of the Revolution, capturing a detachment of British soldiers single-handed; Thomas Juniper distinguished himself in the War of 1812; Charles Juniper in the Mexican War, and Roscoe Juniper was a Confederate hero at Bull Run. Other Junipers have been noted statesmen, scholars and scientists.

Sylvester Juniper also is in the direct line on his mother's side from William the Conqueror.

"Why Grace! Don't tell me you're still here! . . . Honestly, there's hardly anybody left that used to be here—except you . . . Haven't you ever left at all?

"Well how long have you been here anyway, Grace? . . . Five years! Just imagine that! In one place! . . . Me? . . . Oh, I've been everywhere . . . Well, I was in New York . . . Oh yes, I liked it all right—for awhile. The pace there's pretty fast though. I don't believe you'd like it . . . Then I was in Boston . . . Oh it was all right—only I didn't like the climate . . .

"Here? . . . Oh, I've been back here for about a year . . . Yes, I've been at Bigger's . . . and Mushrooms . . . and Blights' . . . Well I did mean to call you up, but—well I didn't suppose you were still here . . .

"Say, is old Mr. Grouch still here? . . . Of all things! . . . I don't suppose he'll ever leave . . . I guess you and he are about the only two left . . . And you know you look about the same as you ever did, Grace . . . You really haven't changed much.

"Well how's everything going, Grace? . . . I mean the business? . . . Well what I really came in about was—say, do you think they need any help around here . . . Well you see—well they've had a little retrenchment at Blights and I thought—well if there was anything open, I—I'd sort of like to come back here."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Bride Weeps, Raves, Yells at Husband on Slight Provocation; Fearing Loss of His Love, She Asks How to Be Gentle and Courteous

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A few months ago I was married, for the second time. My husband is five years older than I and one of the sweetest, finest men I have ever known. I love him as deeply as I am capable of loving any man, ever again, and I want to be as good a wife as I possibly can.

Previous to meeting him, several tempestuous chapters in my life consumed so much emotion, and I have known such turmoil, chaos and misery—mostly in connection with my first marriage—that I feel rather burned out. I am 26, but I have lived so fast and hard, emotionally, over a period of ten years, that my experiences would fill three average lives of similar length.

What is troubling me is this—there are several traits in my character very similar to certain unpleasant traits of the Scarlett O'Hara personality. These qualities are headstrong wilfulness, selfishness, and some callousness to the interests of others. However, I am not conceited, arrogant, materialistic, etc. Rather, I am overly sensitive, too quick to take offense, too easily hurt, and much too emotional.

I have more tolerant views on human behavior than my husband, and a more sociable temperament. He is more reserved and conservative than I am. In fact, his one fault is that he attaches too much importance to appearances. He makes mountains out of molehills, sometimes, in bowing to convention. Most of the time he is right, but he puts too much emphasis on what people may say or think. I hate convention; it wearies me.

So long as my conscience is clear, I don't give a hang what people think or say about me, although I take reasonable precautions to avoid embarrassing situations. After getting myself into a number of scrapes through impulsive actions, harmless in themselves and generous in intention, I finally learned to control my impulses to some degree.

Recently, however, my husband's slightest criticism or smallest seeming reflection on my integrity or fidelity sets me off into tears and ravings, particularly when I am not feeling well. I experience mental chaos and can't think straight. I make scenes that I don't want to make; say things I don't mean and am bitterly sorry afterward, reviling myself as an unspeakable beast for acting so, and yelling at him when he is the dearest, best and most patient husband a girl ever had.

I am afraid that one day I'll go too far at such a time and make a scene so outrageous that he will leave me. He's the kind who is long suffering, but when he blows up, the effect is similar to a bomb falling. I've seen him half way angry at others and I don't want him ever to get mad at me. I fly up and cool off in the space of half an hour and the storm is over. He is just the opposite.

This fear of losing my husband through my lack of emotional control is becoming an obsession. The fear haunts me, rendering self control even more difficult. But I do try so hard to be more like Melanie and less like Scarlett. Please be kind enough to advise me. BRIDE.

Psychiatric Help Essential Here

DEAR BRIDE: In going to pieces when your husband implies, by word or gesture, that your character and conduct are less than perfect, you are indicating that the shoe fits—and how! (Remember the old saying, "It's the truth that hurts"). In taking periodic refuge behind claims of "illness" to test his patience to the limit, you are trying (in very self distrust) to get the measure of his love for you, because hoping it will prove great enough to condone your every weakness, even while dreading—indeed, prophetically foreseeing—that it cannot indefinitely stand the strain of your shortcomings.

It is high time you learned self control—not only to preserve your married happiness, but also to safeguard your very reason. Temper tantrums that defy one's control are danger signals. They indicate precarious emotional instability—tending (as in your case) toward hysterical assertiveness when the rightness of the individual's conduct, conclusions, opinions, etc., come under question. Emotional instability begets the tantrum, and the tantrum in turn further upsets the emotional equilibrium, and as the vicious circle is encouraged, the individual's ability to make a harmonious adjustment to reality is weakened.

Whereas you liken yourself to Scarlett O'Hara, and profess a desire to be more like Melanie Wilkes, I see a closer parallel between your present conduct and that of Mary Todd Lincoln, who was notorious (as a young wife) for her allegedly "ungovernable" temper and petty persecution of her heroically patient husband. Mrs. Lincoln, alas, bogged down into baffling mental illness before her death—a tragic plight which no doubt could have been avoided had she practised mental hygiene throughout life, and particularly if she could have had the benefit of modern psychiatric teaching in charting a healthy pattern of behavior.

One who suffers periodically from uncontrollable hysteria, as you confess that you do, is not so picturesquely temperamental as she is nervously, functionally and perhaps even organically ill. Her condition urgently demands expert diagnosis and careful treatment. Therefore, I recommend for you (1) a thorough physical check-up by the best diagnostician available, as an indispensable health precaution; and (2) a series of conferences with a psychiatrist or psychoanalyst, as a means of establishing permanent emotional equilibrium.

That fear of losing your husband is but the shadow of a more deeply buried fear; a fear which is tangled in the roots of your emotional instability and primarily responsible for it. Find out what it is and get rid of it, and enter into the serene self possession which is the birthright of every intelligent person who employs his intelligence to cast out fear. M. H.

Current Revival Of Plant Stands Is 18th Century

The current revival of flower furniture and plant stands is a hark back to the eighteenth century when cabinetmakers outdid themselves in creating charming pieces for pots of greenery. The modern decorators really started the ideas several years ago with the dictum that no room was really complete decoratively without something growing. And so they began to put these graceful tables and stands in their most fastidiously decorated rooms.

The next step was for the manufacturers to take up the idea and reproduce such pieces for those of us who can afford neither an original old piece nor a custom-made new one. And so we now have in the stores a selection of this furniture to add green and growing notes in the design of pleasant rooms.

Flavorsome Filling

A sandwich filling with plenty of flavor zip uses a deviled ham or other deviled meat foundation with a generous addition of finely chopped or sliced ready-to-use ripe olives and a bit of minced pimiento. Blend with mayonnaise in which prepared mustard is included in proportions of one teaspoon mustard to two tablespoons mayonnaise. Use as spread for thin sliced bread or as filling for small soft rolls. Warm the filled rolls in the oven for service with a piquant green salad.

Chinese Food Featured at Women's City Club Dinner

RAVENOUS or jaded appetites alike are usually tempted by the goodness of chow mein and other foods used on Chinese menus. A tempting Chinese dinner was given last night at the Women's City Club. Chinese music and dancing, guests in Chinese costumes and Chinese food were all a part of the atmosphere. The following is the menu served, and a recipe for making Almond Cookies that were one of the items on the menu.

Menu

Chow Mein — Pineapple and carrot salad
Almond cookies
Ice Cream with Ginger Sauce — Green Tea

Almond Cookies—Sift ½ cup powered sugar. Beat until soft 1½ cups butter, and add sifted sugar gradually. Blend these ingredients until they are very light and creamy. Beat in 1 egg. Sift and stir in 4 cups bread and flour, and add 1 pound blanched and chopped almonds. Roll the dough to the thickness of ¼ inch. Cut into crescent shape. Bake the cakes on a greased tin in a moderate oven, 375 degrees. Dip them when baked in powdered sugar moistened with a few drops of vanilla.

Social Calendar Filled By Topflight Visitors

Many Noted Women Coming Here For Women's National Press Club Party; Before and After Events Arranged

By Hope Ridings Miller.

With a number of topflight visitors scheduled to be in town in the next few days, the social calendar will be full speed ahead from now right on through Easter.

Noted women by the dozens are coming in tomorrow for the annual stunt party of the Women's National Press Club, and most of them will remain for a few days to attend a round of fetes. In keeping with custom a number of cocktail parties will precede the dinner and a number of "follow-up" events will take place on Sunday and Monday.

HOPE R. MILLER

Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry will be among those entertaining press women and their guests before the dinner. Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes will gather a small group at her house at the same time; and Mrs. John O. Herrick and Mrs. Ann Wheaton will entertain several out-of-towners and stunt party honor guests at a cocktail party at the Willard.

Mrs. Joseph Byrns will entertain at luncheon tomorrow in honor of Mrs. James G. Stahlmann, of Nashville, Tenn., who is coming to town for the stunt party. Mrs. Stahlmann, who is the wife of the publisher of the Nashville Banner, will be guest of honor at a luncheon Monday to be given by Mrs. Jesse Cottrell. Others in the company will be wives of the Tennessee Congressional delegation.

Mrs. James Madison Blackwell, of New York, who is known professionally as Betsy Talbot Blackwell, editor of Mademoiselle Magazine, will arrive tomorrow and will be the week-end guest of Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard at her home in Alexandria. Mrs. Dillard will return tomorrow night from Mexico City.

Fetes for out-of-towners, as well as prominent in-towners, will fill Sunday's calendar. I understand quite a number of visitors have been bidden to the "at home" to be given that afternoon by the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt. The party will be the second in a series.

A week-end fete that promises to be especially interesting will be the breakfast at which Dr. and Mrs. Walter Bloedorn will entertain Sunday morning. The event will take place at the Army-Navy Club, and guests of honor will be Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, the former of which recently returned from an extended sojourn in central Europe.

Igor Gorin To Be Honored

In town yesterday for a brief stay en route to New York was Igor Gorin, noted barytone, who will appear here in a concert Sunday afternoon. He and his attractive wife will arrive in Washington that morning and will be feted after the concert at a small supper party to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Rutherford.

At luncheon yesterday, Mr. Gorin told me something of his life and career, but he dwelt longest on the fact that next month he will become a full-fledged citizen of this country. "That will be a dream come true," he said.

Born 30 years ago in the Polish Ukraine, he spent much of his early life in Austria and in Czechoslovakia. He already had made a name for himself on concert stages throughout Europe and had sung leading roles in the opera at Prague when he decided to come to the United States.

He landed in New York in 1935, not knowing a single word of English. He learned the language by singing it, and in less than a year, he was appearing on the concert stage.

Eventually, he found his way to Hollywood, and in more recent years he has divided his time between the East and West coasts—appearing on numerous radio and concert programs.

Mr. Gorin and Mr. Rutherford became acquainted three years ago when the former sang on a program in Salt Lake City and the latter was in the audience.

Rose MacDonald Coming to Town

Other notables scheduled to come to town in the next few days include Miss Rose McDonald, of Berryville, Va., whose recent book, "Mrs. Robert E. Lee," is attracting wide attention. A week from tomorrow Mrs. William Chapin Huntington will entertain at tea in honor of Miss MacDonald, and guests will have an opportunity to hear the author describe some of her advantures in assembling material on the woman who was her mother's close friend.

Still another noted woman who will arrive here next week for a brief visit is Mme. Kamaladevi, of Bombay, a member of the executive committee of the Indian National Congress. A woman of distinction on many accounts, Mme. Kamaladevi made headlines around the world some years ago when she was the first Hindu woman to go on the stage.

She is a sister-in-law of Mme. Naidu, famous Indian poet, and has been in this country on a lecture tour since early December. She is expected to arrive here Tuesday and will be the guest of Miss Mollie Ray Carroll.

Senate Daughter Sets Snappy Swing Pace

Debut? Well, not yet awhile, for young Miss Joan Lundeen, daughter of Senator Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, and Mrs. Lundeen, is all wrapped up in studies and the activities of her classmates. Interested in all outdoor activities and especially music, she specialized in classical work until a couple of years ago, when she branched into popular music. Now she can swing a mean tune from any piano and as a result is in constant demand for school parties and dances. Many an evening the Lundeen household rings to the rafters with music and gay laughter

Fish Debut Set for May 4

Mrs. Hamilton Fish, wife of Representative Fish, of New York, has tentatively picked May 4 as the date for the coming out tea she will give in honor of her pretty daughter, Miss Elizabeth Fish. She hopes to hold the party at the handsome Larz Anderson residence on Massachusetts avenue, now the headquarters of the Society of the Cincinnati, of which her husband is a director.

Miss Fish was to have studied in Paris this winter, but the war changed all that, and she is to be one of many spring debutantes instead. Her mother purposely chose a date on which Congress would still be in session.

Yesterday Mrs. Fish entertained at a luncheon at the 1925 F Street Club for her sister, Mrs. Henry Forster, of Garrison, N. Y. As Garrison was in the center of the recent ice storm in New York, and all the trees and telephone wires are down, Mrs. Foster fled to a place where there is light and heat. She is staying with another sister, Miss Janet Fish, who is superintendent of nurses at Emergency Hospital.

Baron James Baeyens Brings French Record to Cocktail Party of the Hintons

BARON JAMES BAEYENS, of the French Embassy, brought a French translation of "We'll Hang Our Washing on the Siegfried Line," which he had just received from Paris, to the cocktail party given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton. The host played the piano, and wherever there are Hintons there is apt to be music.

Guest of honor at the party was Mrs. Edwin L. James, attractive French wife of the managing editor of the New York Times. She is visiting the Hintons for several days, and with her hosts will lunch at the French Embassy tomorrow.

VIRTUALLY the entire embassy staff, from the Ambassador down, was present yesterday. Among them were the Military Attache and Mme. Lombard, M. and Mme. Charles Lucet and Ensign Guy Dalpaiz, whose father was former head of the French Lines.

The hostess wore a black dress with a becoming collar of white eyelet embroidery. Other guests included Senhora de Martins, wife of the Brazilian envoy, who will give a reception "in the South American way" for Carmen Miranda, if the later's health permits—she has not been feeling well during her Washington engagement; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey, who is just back from the South; Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Marion Warburg, Mrs. Lawrence Baker and several others.

The Hintons' acquaintance with Mr. and Mrs. James dates from the days when the two families lived in Paris an dlater London, where Mr. James headed the foreign bureau of the New York Times.

LOUISE RAINER is spending an average of four hours a day at the tinsmith's this week being fitted for a suit of armor for "St. Joan," in which she opens on Sunday evening at the Belasco. The little, dark, haired star has confided to friends she expects at any moment to have a rivet driven into her back during the fitting.

Katherine Cornell has loaned Miss Rainer the prompting book which she used when she performed in Shaw's famous play. On Miss Rainer's dressing room door is an enormous star which Sarah Bernhart herself pinned there when she played in Washington, so the actress is starting her first stage performance in this country under favorable auspices.

FRANCES NASH (Mrs. Edwin Watson) will be soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra at the last concert of the season here on Tuesday, April 2. She will play Saint-Saens' piano concerto.

A profesisonal pianist of considerable achievement, Mrs. Watson has appeared few times in public of late as she is too busy being the wife of the President's secretary and military aide. She has performed abroad with the Paris, Berlin and Vienna orchestras, and in this country with symphonies of Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, St. Louis and Washington.

Mrs. Watson will entertain informally at cocktails on Wednesday at her apartment in the Kennedy-Warren.

PARTY NOTES: Mrs. Charles M. Lea and Mrs. Demarest Lloyd were among the hosts at tea and cocktails yesterday . . . Mrs. Hollister Sturges will give a tea on Sunday, and that evening Mrs. Harry Black will entertain informally at dinner.

Brackenridge Award Goes to Chicago Girl

Club's First National Memorial Scholarship Given to Rose Samsell for Study At Texas State College for Women

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Society Editor.

The award of the first national M. Eleanor Brackenridge memorial scholarship to Rose Samsell, of Chicago, was announced last night by Mrs. E. W. Schwartze, president of the M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club, at its second annual banquet. The affair, held in Wesley Hall, marked the observance of Friendship Day in memory of Miss Brackenridge, Texas philanthropist and club leader for whom the organization is named.

The club, formed here under the leadership of Mrs. Schwartze two formed in San Antonio. More than 100 small groups throughout the country joined in the Friendship Day observance with dinners, programs and teas.

Mrs. Schwartze as a girl received the first scholarship to the Texas State College for Women, awarded under a fund established years ago by Miss Brackenridge. Miss Samsell, to whom the club's award goes this year, is the daughter of Lucy Rose Richmond Samsell, who was the second girl to benefit from the original scholarship fund. Her father, Richard Samsell, is dean of the La Salle Extension School, Chicago. She will attend the Texas State College next year.

Mrs. Schwartze's gratitude to Miss Breckenridge and high regard for her ideals led to the founding of the club here as a national organization to carry on similar work in her memory. She presided at last night's banquet and read in tribute to Miss Breckenridge a poem written by Etta Baldwin Oldham. The last four lines were:

The yearnings for true goodness fast extend
Her radiant pattern in a widening sphere—
And yet her wish would be that we transcend
Her own capacity to be a friend.

Friendship Day is now observed throughout Texas through the efforts of the club. Mrs. Schwartze also read a message of congratulations from Dr. L. H. Hubbard, president of the Texas State College.

Other speakers were Robert D. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, whose subject was "The Teacher, the Pupil's Friend," and Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church, on "The Greatest of All Friends." Clyde Crouch, of Strayer Business College, for a course at which the club's first scholarship was awarded last year, offered the invocation.

The program also included a tribute to Miss Brackenridge, as a friend, by Helen Morton, and solos by Charles I. Haycraft, accompanied by Elsie Harvey Weaver.

Chinese Culture Is Changing, Says Dr. Hu

20th Century Club Hears of Steady Gains Since End of Monarchy

Dr. Hu Shih, scholar and philosopher, yesterday addressed the Twentieth Century Club at its monthly meeting at the Y. W. C. A. Dr. Hu, Ambassador of China, instead of discussing the war situation, talked on the cultural changes in China which, he said, are an intregal part of the Chinese renaissance.

He pointed out that steady cultural change had been going on since the overthrow of the monarchy in 1911. This, he said, was one of the greatest events in human history, for it established the first republic and marked the beginning of a new era in Asia.

China has always been a country in which it was possible for the humblest to rise to heights of distinction, he said, and in which there was no strongly organized ecclesiastical order or ruling aristocracy. As a result, since the founding of the republic, there has been freedom of contact and response to cultural influences from outside with no formidable centers of resistance to them.

Women have always exerted a powerful influence in China, said Dr. Hu, and declared that China had the earliest of "hen-pecked husband" stories.

The Ambassador was introduced by Mrs. Edward G. Montgomery, president of the club.

At the business meeting a resolution was passed to continue the Gallinger Hospital committee of the club, at the request of the District Health officers. It will administer the $100 revolving fund, given as a memorial to Elizabeth A. Gilbert. A letter was read from Dorothy Canfield Fisher, who recently spoke before the club, commending the project and donating to it the expense money she received at the time of her speaking engagement.

April 4 was announced as the date of the meeting at which Mrs. Frederic Farrington will be hostess on the campus on Chevy Chase Junior College. She is writing a skit, "There's Life in the Old Girl Yet," in which members will appear.

Petworth Club Praises Lodge

A resolution expressing confidence in Thomas Lodge, new chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, was passed yesterday at the monthly meeting of the Petworth Women's Club. He was commended for his "steady and straightforward attitude on the liquor question.

A food sale, "from soup to nuts," was conducted at the meeting, held at the Petworth Methodist Church. Mrs. Timothy Tincher, chairman of the clubhouse fund committee, was in charge.

With Thursday, maid's day out, the club members took advantage of the sale to provide their dinner menus. Those who contributed to the sale brought the dishes which were their favorites.

Mrs. Tincher, whose specialty is making vegetable soup, brought a huge pot of that. Mrs. Frank Stuart, the club president, brought her favorite fudge cake. Mrs. Frank McMaugh supplied individual meat pies, which were sold almost before they arrived, news of them having gotten about among the membership. Mrs. Mildred Kimball, another member of the clubhouse committee, brought yeast rolls and doughnuts.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Theodore Tiller, reviewed "A Chip Off My Shoulder," by Stokes.

The luncheon preceding the program was served by members of the literature section, of which Mrs. Benjamin Waldo was chairman.

*X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, MARCH 8, 1940 23

Bethesda, Eastern Win in Metro Tourney

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 7.—The Washington training camp has its usual quota of The Great Uninvited—the kids who hitchhike from Chicago, boys from the North willing to pay their own expenses for a tryout, native Florida talent ambitious to make a short cut to the majors, what with big league camps so handy.

POVICH

They are strictly long-shots. The first temptation of big league managers is to shoo 'em off the premises and save further bother. The boy who doesn't come to the notice of the hundreds of scouts who fine-comb the minor leagues and the schools and sandlots is assumed to be an impossible bushwhacker who has no right in a big league camp.

But, somehow, the prejudice melts when a lad presents himself. He always gets a suit. They always look him over. It isn't much of a try-out for the lad, because a big league manager thinks he can detect talent in a boy the first time he throws a ball or swings a bat. But that try-out, however brief, is always his. Because big league managers always live in fear —the fear that they may be turning a nugget in the raw away from camp.

It has happened before. Good ball players have been shooed out of big league camps by managers who wouldn't tolerate a bit of crudeness in a lad who had undiscovered latent talents. Listen:

On a day in March at San Antonio a dozen years ago, a big, gangling fellow in Army shoes shuffled into the Giants' camp and said he was a pitcher. Manager John McGraw asked him what professional experience he boasted, and he said he had been pitching only for the Army post team. He got short shrift. He was literally chased out of the Giants camp. That fellow was Jerome (Dizzy) Dean.

At Biloxi, Miss., in 1935, Buddy Myer prevailed upon Manager Bucky Harris to give a tryout to a young neighbor-kid from Myer's home town of Ellisville, Miss. Merely as a favor to Myer, Harris ordered the clubhouse boys to outfit the lad with a suit, and agreed to look him over. Shyness marked the boy's every movement. If he had talent, he was too nervous to exhibit it. Harris wagged his head in some disgust. The next day the boy didn't come back to the field. Myer said he had packed and left for home. That fellow was Harold Craft, who blossomed as the star centerfielder of the Pennant-winning Cincinnati Reds.

Two boys walked into the Polo Grounds on a September afternoon in 1918 to get a tryout with the Giants. Rather, they tried to walk into the Polo Grounds and were turned away at the gate because they couldn't convince an attendant that they were ball players. They got in finally and reported to Manager McGraw. One was a slender, dark-haired lad who hoped to get a job at second base. The other was a short, chunky fellow who told McGraw he was a catcher. They got tryouts—10 minutes long, before that day's game, and McGraw then sent them on their way. The little, dark-haired fellow was Bucky Harris. The chunky little catcher was Benny Bengough.

On a day in New York, four years ago, a strapping youngster walked into the Nats' dressing room at Yankee Stadium and said he would like to have a tryout at first base. The Nats were strictly Joe Kuhel-minded at that time, but the boy was permitted to work out in the infield before the game. Apparently the impression he made was not profound. Manager Harris draped a paternal arm around the lad's shoulder at the end of the workout, and told him to come back later, perhaps. The boy never came back, that is, to the Nats. He came back as Frank McCormick, the National League's runs-batted-in champion for the Cincinnati Reds.

On a spring day at New Orleans in 1923, a boy who had been the star shortstop and third baseman of the Mississippi A. and M. varsity nine walked uninvited into the camp of the Cleveland Indians. He'd sign a contract, he said, for a $1,000 bonus. The Cleveland manager, outraged at the brashness of this green-pea, actually shouted him out of the park. The boy walked across the city to the camp of the New Orleans Pelicans and signed a contract with the provision that he receive half of the purchase price if he made good and was sold to a major league team. Two years later that boy collected $12,500 because he was Buddy Myer, sold to Washington for $25,000.

Now you know why every kid who wanders into a big league camp gets a tryout.

Tide Swamps Little Hoyas; W.-L. Loses

Georgetown Prep Defeated, 62-41; Bethesdans Win, 47-21, at Tech

By Bill Burnett

The highest total run up by a scholastic five of Washington this year was credited to Eastern High last night as it ground out a 62-41 victory over Georgetown Prep in the quarterfinals of the Metropolitan tournament at Tech gym.

Advancing along with Eastern to the semifinals was Bethesda-Chevy Chase, which staged a field day at the expense of Washington-Lee last night to win, 47-21. A crowd of about 2,000, mostly Bethesda students, was on hand to witness the twin bill.

In both games the winners led after the first quarter, from there in the interest being attached to individual performances or the winners' eventual margin.

Again it was Bob (Gun) Custer who highlighted an otherwise dull pair of games with his scoring. Twenty-two points sent to his credit, though he was out of action for almost a full quarter. And his defensive play was a little better than at any other time this season.

Sport Barret Stars

Custer's customary reign over scorers was almost infringed upon by Prep's Ray (Sport) Barrett, who rang up a total of 17 points toward a losing cause. Ray's brother, Bob, was the only other consistent scorer for the Garrett Parkers, getting 8 points in the third quarter and a total of 12.

Though responsible for the first 3 points of the game, all by Eckrich, Prep faded when Custer came back with 6 for Eastern. The result was never again in doubt. The count after one period was 17 to 11. At the intermission it was 33 to 13, but with reserves holding out for Eastern, Prep came back to lag by only 46 to 31, after the third quarter. Custer's return to the line-up in the last period, during which he accounted for 6 points, spelled the end of Prep's chances.

First Half Fight

Washington-Lee, on the very short end of the odds, managed to make a fight of it for the first half, after which it trailed by only 18-12, but in the second half it was soundly thrashed.

The loss was the Little Generals' sixteenth in 32 games, and the victory was Bethesda's twentieth out of 25 starts. And on the strength of its powerful performance, the Bethesdan's earned an even chance of getting to the finals on Monday night.

Big gun in Bethesda's attack, as usual, was the unsmiling but highly effective Johnny Shumate. His 12 points beat out his teammate and captain, Bill Barnsley, by 2 points. "Rube" McNab, spindly pivotman of the losers, was the only player to see action throughout and checked in one of his finest efforts of the year. He tallied 8 points, and second honors for the losers were split between Jim Mahoney and Bernie Niland, each with 5 points.

Lead Once

After one quarter the Little Generals were already behind, 7-6, but during the first eight minutes they at one time held a 6-4 lead, mainly through the work of Mahoney and McNab. It wasn't until after the third period that Bethesda really came into its own. In possession of a 28-17 edge going into the final session, the winners began hitting from every conceivable angle. W.-L. at the same time struck an arid

Bloodworth Hits Homer, Two Singles

Krakauskas, Haynes Hurl Runless Ball As Rookies Bow; Monteagudo Victim

By Shirlev Povich.

A Staff Correspondent

Orlando, Fla., March 7.—For the first time in his stormy baseball career, Clark Griffith enjoyed defeat today. His team of Washington Rookies was under the management of Griffith himself and was ingloriously beaten, but the 70-year-old owner of the Nats was visibly happy about it all.

Because the winners, by 11-0 score, were the Washington regulars, that team that Griffith will send into the 1940 pennant race. With unconcealed joy he watched the sprightly young men on his No. 1 team make a shambles of the ball game.

The fact that his club of rookies was held to two hits was not exactly discomforting to Manager Griffith, because Owner Griffith was getting an eyeful of superb pitching by three young men on whom the Nats are backing heavily this year.

With something akin to bated breath, both Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris awaited young Sid Hudson's debut on the firing line, and in that highly touted rookie's performance they took particular delight.

Hudson Nearly Ready

The tall, right-handed Hudson gave evidence that he is cut out for faster ball than the Class D Florida League, whence he sprang last fall. He allowed only one hit in his three-inning turn—a single by Rookie Catcher Al Evans, in the third inning.

But what was more important in the eyes of Griffith and Harris was the manner in which the lad conducted himself on the pitching mound. They saw revealed a dead calm, workmanlike youngster who could get the ball over the plate in baffling style and with superb control.

Particularly were the Nats' bosses impressed with Hudson's pitching action. He threw a fast ball, a curve and a clever change of pace with the same motion, to the discomfiture of the hitters.

Two hundred spectators sat in on the opening exhibition game of the season at Tinker Field in perfect baseball weather. Griffith's inability to lead his rookies to victory was no disgrace. His team represented a cross-section of the Piedmont League, the Eastern League, the Florida League, the Havana Winter League, and the Detroit sand lots.

Joe Krakauskas and Joe Haynes were the other regular pitchers who figured in shut-out of the Rookies. Krakauskas, like Hudson, yielded up one hit to the Rookies in a three-inning turn, but Haynes pitched hitless ball in his three-inning job.

Bloodworth Hits Homer

The day's slugging star was Jimmy Bloodworth, the hot favorite to win the Nats' second base job. Bloodworth drew the season's first applause when he slugged a line-drive home run into rightfield with two on base in the first inning, and later contributed two unproductive singles for a perfect day at bat.

In contrast, expensive Rookie Jimmie Pofahl went hitless, but he contributed a pair of fancy fielding plays at shortstop.

The Regulars crowded four runs into the first inning, but they could scarcely be charged to Monteagudo. Second Baseman Eddie Leip and Rightfielder Joe Mellendeck permitted an easy pop by Jimmy Wasdell to drop safely, and a bit later Al Evans fought a losing battle with a foul pop that set the stage for Bloodworth's home-run drive with two on base.

Gumbert to Face Nats

Winter Haven, Fla., March 7 (AP).—Harry Gumbert is being groomed for mound duty Sunday when the New York Giants open their exhibition campaign against the Washington Senators and also has the inside track for the pitching assignment in the National League opener April 16.

Bill Lohrman and Hy Vandenberg were the principal pitchers in today's camp game.

Joe Walters' 28 Points Pace Petworth to Post-A.A.U. Victory

Theta Delta Chi Loses, 59-24 in Unlimited Game; Bell Clothiers Win

Joe Walters, high-scoring forward on Jack Haas' Petworth A. C., neared a District A. A. U. tourney scoring mark last night, totaling 28 points as his team routed Theta Delta Chi's fraternity members, 59-24.

The game was the first of two unlimited games on the second night's schedule of the tourney in Heurich gym, sponsored annually by The Washington Post.

In the second unlimited game, the Bell Clothiers had their hands full in turning back the General Accounting Office five, 33-27. In fact, the G. A. O. players carried the fight to their rivals in the first half, but could not keep up in the closing session. Crisafulli led the winners with 11 points, while McCluney paced the losers.

The first of two Y. M. C. A. teams entered drew away in the second half to hand Congress Heights a 25-15 defeat in the first round 145-pound class contest, first game on the schedule.

Walters dropped 12 field goals and four foul shots for the 28-point total, despite the fact that he took a shot only when clear and on other occasions passed to his teammates. He was successful on 75 per cent of his shots.

Petworth led, 28-12, at halftime and was even more superior in the last two quarters, piling up 31 points to an even dozen for the losers. Fillah was Walters' chief assistant in the scoring while Duthie was the only consistent point-maker for the losers.

Congress Heights held the Y. M. C. A. five to a 7-6 margin at halftime of the lighter class encounter but seven players figured in the second half scoring as the eventual winners widened the gap to 10 points at the final whistle. D. Treganowan and Honacker for the winners, and Taylor for the losers, scored six points each.

Treasury Plays Greenbelt in Post Tourney

Evenly matched rivals clash tonight on the three-game program of the District A. A. U. championship tournament, being sponsored by The Washington Post at Heurich's gymnasium, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest. In the two unlimited class battle, Government department clubs meet suburban foes in interesting struggles.

The Greenbelt A. C. five, representing Maryland's thriving community, will tackle Treasury Department at 9:30 p. m. Greenbelt, never lacking for rooters, won two games last year in a surprising display of strength and should be improved for this season. Bellman Heating, another suburban team, will face a stern test in meeting the Census Bureau Americans, starting at 8:30.

What may prove the feature of the program is the clash of Washington Flour and the Stewart Brothers Aces. The Aces are well known in tournament circles having won several titles while advancing in weight classes. This is the first fling of these youngsters in the 145-pound division.

They have grown but they will face a good club in Washington Flour, which has shown form in league competition this year.

As usual, the nominal admission will be 25 cents to each program. Get down to the Heurich gym early.

Golfer Scores Double Aces At Rock Creek

First Time in Course History Feat Accomplished

Charles T. Mattern, one of Rock Creek's consistent winter golfers, took advantage of a temporary green on the fifth hole of "A" course yesterday to make two holes-in-one in three holes.

Playing the regular green and the regular cup on the 167-yard third hole, Mattern watched his ball trickle in the cup for his first hole-in-one.

Then two holes later, standing on the tee of the 181-yard par three that runs parallel to Sixteenth street, he hit a long shot that reached the temporary green and rolled in the big cup. It was the first time in the history of the uptown municipal course that a player has scored two aces in three holes, despite the frequent use of temporary greens through the winter.

Despite the two aces, Mattern ran into lots of trouble celebrating the feat and finished with a 45.

Ralph Grimes and George Marlow witnessed the double aces.

Champion Jameson Loses in Florida Golf

National Titlist Defeated, 4 and 3, By Mrs. Nolan in Quarter-Finals Of St. Augustine Golf Play

By International News Service

St. Augustine, Fla., March 7.—The winter golf circuit in which Patty Berg recently went down to a surprise defeat today added National Champion Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., to its list of upset victims.

In a reversal as amazing as that of Miss Berg's, the Texas girl today bowed, 4 and 3, to Mrs. Thomas Nolan, of Newcastle, Pa., in a quarter-final match of the Florida East Coast championship.

Although Mrs. Nolan was a virtual unknown and had only minor tournament victories to her credit, she staged a brilliant performance, putting accurately and rarely making a mistake. She was out in 38 to have Miss James 2 down, won the first two holes coming in and then chipped in from off the fifteenth green to get her victory.

Miss Jameson, tournament medalist and early favorite to meet Patty Berg in the finals, was in trouble frequently and played far below her usual form.

Miss Berg advanced with a 4 and 3 victory over Frances Owen, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Elizabeth Hicks, of Long Beach, Calif., won from Laddie Irwin, Montclair, N. J., 4 and 3.

Carrasquel Off for Florida—English No Better

Nats' Venezuelan Pitcher Promises 15 Victories Eynon Says

By Al Hailey

Senor Alejandro Carrasquel, Venezuela's gift to the Nats' pitching staff, was in town yesterday with a new glint in his eye—a glint Secretary Eddie Eynon interpreted to mean a guarantee of 15 victories for the Washington lads in their 1940 adventure in the American League.

Reason Eynon arrived at his conclusion is simple—he just expressed the wish, and Alexa turned loose a wide grin which could have meant anything.

Unable to understand anything Alex had to say all morning, the Nats secretary was content to put an affirmative meaning to Alex' grin and send him on to the Orlando, Fla., spring training quarters on an evening train.

The senor pulled into town at dusk on Wednesday, roused a night-watchman at Griffith Stadium, who in turn informed Eynon that the Nats' "missing man No. 1" was on hand.

Alex had not been heard of in more than a fortnight and the Nats bosses were beginning to have fears for the non-English speaking Venezuelan who looked such a great pitching prospect early last season.

"I've been trying to get something out of him all morning," Eynon

New College Boxing Rule Under Fire in Eastern Tourney

Fights Start Tonight at Penn State

Injured Boxer May Now Win Decision; 6 Teams to Seek Army's 1939 Title

By the Associated Press

State College, Pa., March 7.—College boxing's latest move to divorce itself from professional practices of the sport—a rule which permits awarding a decision to an injured boxer—gets a major tournament test here this week-end in the Nation's oldest collegiate ring championships.

Officials at the seventeenth annual Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association Tournament, which opens tomorrow night, will observe the new college rule that if a contestant is out sufficiently to necessitate halting the bout, the referee and judges "shall award the bout to the contestant who is ahead on points at the time of the accident" instead of to the uninjured boxer on a technical knockout.

T. K. O. Automatic

In professional boxing a technical knockout is automatically awarded to the uninjured boxer regardless of his showing prior to the accident. California has the only rule comparable to the collegiate practice with its policy of declaring a bout a draw if the injured boxer is ahead on points at the time.

The new rule follows similar legislation by college officials against what they term "unsatisfactory elements" of the sport. Last year eligibility rules barring boxers with experience other than on high school or prep teams or in Olympic tryouts were set up together with a rule requiring a boxer knocked down to take the count of nine regardless of his condition.

Thirty-eight boxers representing Penn State, Army, Syracuse, Cornell, Dartmouth, Yale and Western Maryland will fight for titles in the two-day Eastern association tournament.

Army Defends Title

Army, Syracuse and Penn State, each represented by full eight-man teams, are expected to fight it out for the team title now held by the Cadets, Cornell's six-man team is given only an outside chance.

Individual title favorites include Milford Fahey, undefeated Syracuse 120-pounder; Walt Lavendusky, Army's two-time 120-pound titlist, who was moved up to the 127-pound class; Frank Stanko, Penn State 135-pounder; Loren Schoff, undefeated Syracuse 145-pounder; Bennie Sanderson, Pen State 155-pounder, who is undefeated this year; Charles Healy, defending 165-pound champion from Syracuse, and Americo Woyciesjes, Syracuse knockout ace and defending 175-pound champion. Harry Stella, Army football captain last fall, is the leading heavyweight contender.

Conditions Listed For Point-to-Point Races at Rokeby

Special Dispatch to The Post

Middleburg, Va., March 7.—Conditions have been outlined for the Piedmont and neighboring hunts point-to-point races, which will be held Saturday, March 30, at Rokeby Farm, home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon, near Upperville. The 200-pound heavyweight race will have "owners to ride" conditions.

Horses to qualify as runners in the Piedmont meeting will be those "primarily kept for hunting purposes, who have regularly and fairly hunted during the current season by the owner or member of the immediate family and who have not run under rules of the N. S. and H. A. or the Jockey Club within the previous two years, according to Jack Skinner, secretary.

The committee is composed of Dr. A. C. Randolph, chairman; D. C. Sands, M. F. H., Middleburg Hunt; Fletcher Harper, M. F. H., Orange County Hunt; W. C. Fletcher, Robert Fletcher, Paul Mellon and Mr. Skinner.

Lew Jenkins Hopes For Lou Ambers Bout

New York, March 7 (AP).—Lew Jenkins, the hard hitting Sweetwater, Tex., lightweight, pins his hopes for a shot at Lou Ambers' title on a 15-round bout with Tippy Larkin, of Garfield, N. J., in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

The slender Texan has chalked up eight straight victories since his arrival in the East last summer. The last five have been by knockouts and include conquests over such prominent 135-pounders as Mike Belloise and Billy Marquart.

Spring Grid Drills Hampered by Snow

Lincoln, Nebr., March 7 (AP).—Got any sunburn lotion, boys?

That was Coach Bill Jones' query to his University of Nebraska football proteges yesterday. They had hoped to get outside for a workout, but a quick peek at the snow and rain changed all that.

Because of the weather, the Huskers have had to stay inside every day since spring drills opened last Friday. Last year the squad missed 21 days of outdoor workouts on account of the weather, and the Biffer is still hoping for a break.

Georgetown Trackmen Bring Back the Good Old Days

Hoya Trackmen Seek More Titles Tomorrow

Trophy-Conscious G. U. Stars to Run In K. C. Games in N.Y.

Winning trophies at the pace set by the famous Georgetown track teams of the 'teens and the 20's, Hap Hardell's indoor stars will seek added titles in the Knights of Columbus games tomorrow in Madison Square Garden.

Already five trophy additions and nearly 50 medals grace the walls of the Hoya athletic office and the sweaters of the team members. Al Blozis, shotput star; Phil Graves, freshman contender in the "1,000" yard run and the varsity mile relay team will be after more in tomorrow's games and additional outdoor affairs such as the Penn Relays, A. A. U. and IC-4A games, plus dual meets.

A huge plaque is the biggest of the trophy additions for the present season, given for the team trophy in the Maryland University-Fifth Regiment games in Baltimore. Two loving cups, one for the mile relay victory and another for running the fastest mile in the last three years in the Maryland games are proud possessions. In addition, the cup for the freshman medley relay victory in the De LaSalle games and the match race victory over New York U. in the Seton Hall games, also a varsity mile relay accomplishment.

Blozis, shotput winner every time out this season, in addition to setting a world record and breaking his own mark, has collected a half dozen medals and Graves is not far back, for his performances in the "1,000."

Hilltoppers Hitting Pace Set by Old-Time Georgetown Cindermen

Members of the mile relay team boast medals, in addition to the freshman distance medley relay team, which lacked only 1.7 seconds of the world mark last week, and broke the existing freshman mark by 10 seconds.

Georgetown's team has been pitted against New York U., recognized as the greatest mile relay combination in the East, Holy Cross and St. John's in tomorrow's team feature in the Garden.

Charley Neumeyer will be in a new starting role, while other members of the quartet will be Vinnie Braun, Ken Lyden and Morty Alnwick.

Graves will renew his Invitation 1,000 rivalry against Les MacMitchell, N. Y. U. miler.

St. Joseph's Five Plays St. Matthew's

St. Joseph's basketball team will engage St. Matthew's five tonight in a second-round game of the St. John's Parochial School tournament at the cadets' gym at 7 o'clock.

In other games of the evening, St. Stephen's, defending champions, meet Holy Name; Sacred Heart plays St. Aloysius, and St. Gabriel clashes with Blessed Sacrament.

The winners of tonight's games will play in semifinals beginning at 2 p. m. Saturday.

St. Alban's Soccermen Defeat Prep

Little Hoyas Bow, 3-0, as Saints Win Championship

St. Alban's School won the District Private School Soccer League championship for the third straight year yesterday by closing the season with a 3-to-1 victory over Georgetown Prep at the St. Alban's Field.

The victory also gave them the pennant in the Interstate Academic Conference and permanent possession of the District soccer trophy.

Undefeated all year, the Saints took the lead when Courtney Sunday scored on a free penalty kick in the first quarter. Bill Manger added another goal in the second quarter with a long kick from left wing. Burr Pigott, with a spectacular boot from deep center, put over the final goal.

The Saints have won six games and lost two in the past season.

Ten Horses Added To Annual Redland Races Tomorrow

Ten horses were added to the entries for the annual Redland point-to-point races, the first to offer hunt competition in this section, tomorrow. Crompton Smith, winner of the 1937 running of the 5-mile bowl race, will return to action with the same horse, Bay Broom. In addition, he will enter Mowgri. Hal B. Claggett has entered Black Knight, and Boyd Keys has placed Can Mass in the competition. Another stout contender is Dusky Devil, the property of M. T. Rinehart.

Emphasis was added to the pair race when entries were received from L. A. Randle for his Monty and Sonny, pair race winners in 1938. These horses are full brother and sister. Mr. and Mrs. Randle will ride.

The heavyweight race which will send T. T. Mott's famous Play Pal (James A.) against The Boob, owned by John Richards, promises to be a keenly-fought affair. Gerald B. Webb yesterday sent in the entry of Easy Mark, winner of three point-to-point races in a row last year. He is the editor of the Middleburg Chronicle.

Bruins Beat N.Y. Americans; Pass Rangers

National League Ice Hockey Champions Win, 2-1, Despite Shore

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—The inspired play of Eddie Shore, in action against his former teammates for the first time in his 14 years as a big leaguer, wasn't enough tonight, and Boston Bruins took undisputed possession of first place in the National Hockey League with a 2-1 victory over New York Americans.

Shore took more than his usual share of work on the American defense, obviously trying to do all in his power to lick the team with which he became one of hockey's all-time greats. But the Americans failed to follow through and the Bruins skated away with a close but easy triumph before 12,500 fans.

The win vaulted the champion Bruins past the idle Rangers into first place and still left the Montreal Canadiens, also beaten tonight, a mathematical chance of overhauling the Americans for the last play-off spot. To do so, they must win all their four remaining games while the Americans lose their four.

Milt Schmidt, the Bruins' great center, almost wrecked the Americans single-handed. He picked up a loose puck that Bobby Bauer left 12 feet out to shoot the first goal after 12 minutes' play and in the third period he made the play for Porky Dumart's goal that gave Boston a 2-0 lead.

Chicago Blackhawks Stop Canadiens, 6-1

Montreal, March 7 (AP).—Rookie Goalie Paul Goodman, of the Chicago Blackhawks, missed his fifth shutout of the season by a matter of minutes tonight as the Hawks blasted the spiritless Montreal Canadiens, 6-1, in a National Hockey League game.

The goal that robbed Goodman of a perfect game came from the stick of Charlie Sands as the Canadiens, victoryless at home since December 14 and deep in the league cellar, put on their only spurt of the game. Goodman only had about a half-dozen hard shots to handle throughout the game.

Eagles After 2d Place Tonight at Riverside

D. C. Club Seeks to Break Tie With Rovers; Jersey Lads Driving For Lead on Gulls; Play at 8:30 P. M.

Second and fourth place deadlocks in the Eastern Amateur Hockey League will be broken tonight when the Washington Eagles, tied with the New York Rovers for second, meet the River Vale Skeeters, locked with the Atlantic City Sea Gulls for fourth, at Riverside Stadium.

Cellar dwellers for the first few months of the season, the Skeeters have shown marked improvement of late and are bidding for a higher place in the final standings. They have been a nemesis of the Eagles all season. They also snapped the 13-game winning streak of the Baltimore Orioles last week.

Hal Dewey, who has already assured himself of one of the top scorers of the circuit for the year, and Johnny McTeer, defenseman of the Eagles whose play has been outstanding for the past several games, will be the mainstays of the local team in tonight's 8:30 clash.

Norman Burns, former Atlantic City player, recently acquired by the Eagles, and Squee Allen and Hughie Bell, wingmen, are greatly responsible for the late season surge of the River Vale team, and will be marked men tonight.

The Eagles are now the surprise choice to finish the season in second place, back of the leading Baltimore Orioles, as the New York Rovers have encountered a three-week slump that cost them the lead and favorite's role.

Franny Counselman, who, scoring the winning point in Gonzaga's latest victory over St. John's, sparked the attack with 14 points. Lanke led the losers with 9. Each team was able to make good on only one foul shot.

Browns' President Disgusted With Catcher Glenn's Holdout

DolphCamilli, Leiber Also Fail to Sign

Dodger and Cub Players Threaten To Quit Baseball; Reds Meet Dodgers

By the Associated Press

Scranton, Pa., March 7.—President Donald Barnes, of the St. Louis Browns, is "thoroughly out of patience" with Catcher Joe Glenn, a holdout.

Barnes wired a newspaper here he offered Glenn a contract which would enable him to make more money than he received last season "providing he could satisfactorily fill the job as first-string catcher and show the proper spirit and cooperation with the manager and the club."

"He has refused this opportunity," Barnes continued, "and I'm thoroughly out of patience with a man who in the wintertime makes application for unemployment compensation, and then when he has an opportunity of this kind refuses it. If he should decide to quit baseball he could probably then make a valid claim for unemployment compensation."

Glenn this winter applied for unemployment compensation in Pennsylvania and explained he intended to give it to his home town church at Dickinson. Glenn has refused to report for practice until the salary dispute is settled.

Phoenix, Ariz., March 7 (AP).—Hank Leiber, Chicago Cubs' outfielder, said flatly today that he would rather quit baseball than accept the salary offered him by the Cubs for the 1940 season.

He hasn't been in touch with the Cubs management in two weeks, he said.

Leiber, who has been a persistent holdout during his major league career, did not disclose the Cubs' proposed salary.

Hank declares himself to be in the "best shape ever" and said he was working out daily.

Clearwater, Fla., March 7 (AP).—Larry MacPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, today denied emphatically Dolph Camilli, holdout first baseman, has signed his contract or accepted terms.

"Camilli could have had $15,000 for this season, an increase of $1,000 over each of the last two years, had he signed and reported for training February 25," said MacPhail. "Now the best he can get is the same amount he received last year. That is our final offer to him and he can take it or stay on his California sheep ranch.

"He threatened to quit baseball and I informed him to notify me if that was his intention and I would see that his desire was passed along without delay to Commissioner Landis."

Tampa, Fla., March 7 (AP).—The National League champion Reds all but marked time today for their first exhibition game—with Brooklyn's Dodgers tomorrow.

Only a light workout featured the day. Lineups for tomorrow's game were not announced, although Skipper Bill McKechnie has indicated he probably would enter a fledgling nine.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 7 (AP). The inventive genius of Manager Ray Blades, of the St. Louis Cardinals, may make baseball safer for both players and spectators when Pepper Martin is at bat.

For years the Wild Horse's habit of unexpectedly letting go of the bat in taking a healthy cut at the bal has thrown opposing players into a mild panic.

So Blades ordered a leather strap and had it taped at the handle end of the bat, forming a loop into which Pepper is supposed to put his left hand. Then if he loses his grip on the bat as he swings, the loop will hold it and nobody will be injured unless he hits himself, the catcher or the umpire.

"I don't know about that," Martin commented when he tried the thing on. "If the enemy sees me with that loop around my wrist they'll know dern well I ain't going to bunt. Of course, I never bunt anyway, so perhaps it isn't so important after all."

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 7 (AP). Lee Grissom, the New York Yankees' new southpaw, is suffering from a slight charley horse in his right knee, but it has caused him a minimum of trouble.

There wasn't much for him to do today, any way, because Manager Joe McCarthy turned the squad over to newsreel cameramen, who focussed on just about everything in the routine workout.

Horace Stoneham, president of the New York Giants, was a visitor to camp.

San Bernardino, Calif., March 7 (AP).—Manager Frankie Frisch, who in his playing days was a humdinger at stealing base, trained his Pittsburgh Pirates today in the "lost art" of base running.

He also gave them pointers on bunting, saying the Bucs "are woefully weak in laying down bunts as well as lying down while attempting to advance. Some of them actually go into a base on their knees."

Pasadena, Calif., March 7 (AP).—Injuries hit the Chicago White Sox camp today, but far more welcome was the report that Pitcher Clint Brown, last of the holdouts, was on his way here for a conference with Vice President Harry Grabiner.

The injury jinx struck Rookie Catcher Tom Turner, who suffered a charley horse; Pitcher Thornton Lee, a sore arm, and Rookie First Baseman Lew Leiter, hit on the nose by a batted ball. Even Manager Jimmy Dykes wound up with a few aches and pains following some sprightly fielding antics.

Lakeland, Fla., March 7 (AP).—Dick Bartell whacked a homer over the left field wall with two mates on base in the fifth inning today to give Big Miller's Cats a 3-to-2 verdict over Wish Eban's Rats in a Detroit Tiger intra-squad game.

Harold Newhouser and Dick Conger, rookies, held the Rats to two hits in the six-inning contest. The Cats got six hits off Johnny Tate and Johnny Gozzica, rookies.

A Queen Comes to Town

Postscripts . . .

Orlando, Fla., March 7.—"I wouldn't sell him for $50,000," said Clark Griffith today after young Sid Hudson had finished a three-inning turn on the mound in which he allowed the Nats' Rookies only one hit . . . When he waved Hudson to the showers at the end of the third inning, Bucky Harris was grinning from here to there . . . Jimmy Pofahl's throwing arm came in for criticism today when it looked weak compared to the rifle throws of Cecil Travis and Jimmy Bloodworth across the infield . . . Buddy Lewis handled his only two outfield chances—both line drives—as if to the outfield born . . . Cecil Travis demonstrated that he is definitely attempting to become a pull-hitter this season . . . The closest the Rookies came to averting a shutout was when Elmer Gedeon tripled off Joe Krakauskas in the fourth inning . . . for some reason Gedeon loafed on the bases and made only third base . . . The noisiest man on the Rookies' bench was Manager Clark Griffith, reveling in his first managerial job since 1920 . . . Roberto Ortiz, the giant Cuban, contributed the most dazzling play of the ball game . . . He unleashed an incredibly long and perfect throw to the plate to nip Jake Early who tried to score on Welaj's long single to left field . . . Giuliani was waiting with the ball when Early arrived . . . Clark Griffith, who has made no motions to heed Judge Landis' command to bring back to the Washington camp for a further tryout four players released to Springfield, says he will communicate with Landis tomorrow . . . Sid Hudson's duties on the mound today will not interfere with Harris' pitching schedule which lists Hudson to face the New York Giants at Tinker Field on Sunday.—POVICH.

Hassett, West Provide Timely Hits for Bees

Bradenton, Fla., March 7 (AP).—Effective pitching enabled the Boston Bees' forces coached by Bob Coleman to gain a 4-2 triumph over Jack Onslow's division today in a 9-inning practice game.

Coleman's pitching selections, Nick Strincevich, Joe Callahan and Al Lamanna, held the Onslows to 6 hits. Buddy Hassett and Max West each provided the victors with two timely hits.

Nonnenkamp's Triple Wins for Yannigans

Sarasota, Fla., March 7 (AP).—Leo Nonnenkamp's triple with two on base was the blow that enabled the Red Sox Yannigans to give the regulars a 3-1 drubbing today in the first practice game of the season. Nonnenkamp landed on one off Lefty Earl Johnson with two out in the fifth. In the previous inning Elton Deuse doubled off Johnson and scored on Paul Campbell's single and an error.

RECREATION

Odd game decisions marked the Department Store League, Kanns' leaders winning two from Goldenberg's, Raleigh Haberdasher upsetting second place Woodward and Lothrop twice, Lansburgh's winning two from Jelleff's, and Credit Bureau scoring over Guy-Curran. The only shutout was by the Hecht Co. over Garfinckel's.

QUEEN PIN

Stephenson's Bakery pinmen scored their first triple triumph in the last three years in the Southeast League, breaking through with a shutout over Price Florist's. Buddy Chick was high with 346.

Brinkley's leaders beat Square Deal Liquor in the odd one, while Quality Shop rolled team totals of 644 and 1,819 in taking the feature match over Bacas Brothers. Highest set of the league was a 391 by Clem Smith.

ROSSLYN

Fans Jeer As Jim Londos Beats Cox

Joe Dives Through Ropes on Head; Takes Count on Arena Floor

The boos of 1,500 fans lingered in the ears of Jim Londos last night after he disposed of Joe Cox in 36½ minutes of their so-called "world championship" wrestling brawl in Turner's arena.

Cox slapped Jimmy around quite some before he went awry with a flying tackle and landed on his head between Rows A and B. As he lay there listening to the resultant soft music Referee Benny Bortnick counted him out and acclaimed Londos the winner.

The fans then went into their part of the dramatics by hurling peanuts, various odds and ends and a neat assortment of epithets at Jimmy, who took it like a man in the center of the ring. Cox had Londos down once with an arm stretch, and even Jimmy's airplane spin failed to befuddle Joe before his fateful dive.

A's Win Fourth Straight Game

San Francisco, Calif., March 7 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics won their fourth straight exhibition baseball game today, beating Seattle of the Pacific Coast League, 4 to 1, behind the five-hit pitching of Lee Ross, Elon Hogsett and Johnny Babich.

Jo-Jo White's homer off Ross in the third inning was Seattle's only score. The A's sewed the game up in the first inning, scoring three runs on Benny McCoy's single, Bob Johnson's double and Dick Siebert's single combined with two errors.

Toms Brook Wins

Strasburg, Va., March 7.—Playing on their home court, Toms Brook cagers last night came from behind to beat the Junior Order team, of Martinsburg, 48-45.

NATS' ROOKIE PARADE

At Orlando Camp

(This is another of a series of sketches on the rookies seeking jobs with the Nats at their Orlando training camp.)

GEORGE TORRES, Outfielder

This year George Torres reached the voting age of 21, but Cuba's approaching presidential election must be conducted without benefit of Torres' ballot. He is preoccupied with an election of his own. He is trying to elect himself to the Washington outfield.

GEORGE TORRES

He's one of the contingent of Cubans fetched from Havana by Scout Joe Cambria to feed the Washington farm system and when and if Torres graduates to an outfield job with the Nats, the Washington club will have at least one distinction—it will have the smallest outfielder in the big leagues.

The 21-year-old Torres is on the popular conception of the Cuban pattern—small in stature. He stands only 5-feet 7-inches and in civilian clothes could be easily mistaken for a jockey, not a ball player. But in uniform he reveals his power. It is a well-muscled back and thick legs on the model of Roberto Estalella. In uniform he looks indeed like a 170-pounder.

He stepped out from behind a typewriter in an office in Havana two years ago to try his hand in the Havana Amateur League after playing ball in parochial school and it was there that Cambria detected what he believes is talent in Torres. A .42 batting average in the Havana League caused Cambria to sign Torres to a contract with the Nats' Greenville S. C., farm team.

In the Nats' camp at Orlando there is no disposition, incidentally, to discount the little fellow. He drifts back for a fly ball better than many of the outfielders who have worn Washington uniforms in recent years, and his throwing arm has actually elicited gasps from the Nats' bosses. It's that strong and apparently accurate.

They sort of like the way, too, that he snaps into a pitch with a bat in his hand, and the impression is that he's a better ball player than a passel now in the farm system. They like his looks, too, because he is on the handsome side, with small, regular features and a hair-comb that deserves a place in the advertisements. In Cuba, the little fellow probably blushes when they introduce him as George Torres, because Torres in Spanish means "high tower."

Indians to Stage First Intramural Game

Fort Myers, Fla., March 7 (AP).—After better than a week of spring training, the Cleveland Indians will get down to business tomorrow with their first intramural game, a six-inning affair.

Manager Oscar Vitt didn't say so, but with the exception of the pitchers, one of the two teams he named for the clash probably will start the opening game of the regular season.

Hoya Hockey Six Invades Baltimore

Georgetown University's hockey team invades the Sport Center, Baltimore, tonight for an 8:15 o'clock match with Baltimore Loyola College's sextet.

In an early season match at Riverside Stadium the Hoyas nosed out the Orioles, 1 to 0. Loyola and Georgetown played a pair of two overtime deadlocks last year.

Brewers Play Three Crucial Cage Games

Meeting With Sphas Tomorrow to Decide League Championship

Three important basketball games await the Washington Heurich Brewers over a busy week-end.

Tonight the Brewers are to resume their American Basketball League playoff series when they invade Baltimore to oppose Baltimore's Clippers at 8:30 o'clock. On Sunday afternoon they are to meet the Clippers in another postseason contest at Heurich Gymnasium, 2:30 o'clock.

Tomorrow night the Brewers will visit the Broadwood Hotel, Philadelphia, for a 10 o'clock meeting with the Philadelphia Sphas which will determine the American Basketball League's title and the $500 bonus to be awarded the winning club.

The Brewers and Sphas finished their regular schedules in a championship tie with 19 games won and 13 lost.

Wise Bee Disqualified; Charlieinfeld Given Tropical Race

Favorite's Rider Lodges Foul Claim

Returns $2.60 Win Mutuel; Wise Bee's Jockey Admits Foul And Is Suspended

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 7.—The "bridge jumpers," as those who make large wagers on supposedly sure things for a small return, collected on F. J. Buchnan's Charlieinfeld in the Palm Beach Purse here today, but not before almost ten minutes of agonizing suspense and anxiety. The gelding finished second to W. H. Gallagher's Wise Bee, but Jack Flinchum, who was seeking his second winner of the afternoon astride Charlieinfeld, lodged a foul claim which finally was allowed. A neck separated the two horses at the wire.

Charlieinfeld, placed first as a result of the disqualification, was a $2.60 for $2 choice. Of the $24,293 wagered in the straight pool $16,572 was on the Buchanan sprinter.

Jockey McCombs, rider of Wise Bee, was ordered suspended ten days, beginning Saturday, and fined $200 by the stewards.

McCombs admitted that he carried Charlieinfeld wide at the stretch turn, bumped the gelding and accidentally struck him over the head with his whip.

Raise Up was moved into second place, while Plowshare was awarded the show. The time for the 6 furlongs was 1:11 flat.

Charlieinfeld had been carrying 126 pounds and racing well against the best sprinters at Hialeah, whereas he had only 104 to shoulder today. Wise Bee, winner of his only previous start this winter, surprised the figure experts by stealing out into a wide lead. Charlieinfeld gradually reached contention and made a game challenge. He was on virtually even terms with the pacemaker at the final turn. Wise Bee Wise Bee came again and outlasted the choice. Raise up finished four lengths behind the pair.

Running one of the fastest 6 furlongs in Florida racing history, Klayman and Lynch's 4-year-old colt, Calexico, came within two-fifths of a second of the track record in taking the fourth race by five lengths. His time was 1:10 2-5.

PAUL LEE secured clear passage and closed a big gap. TAUT was crowded out of contention after leaving the backstretch.

TONY WEAVER, away forwardly, held the field safe for speed, but faltered through the stretch and just lasted long enough to withstand TOTACHE'S bid. PATRAS was unable to engage the leaders.

MARFEU had no excuses.

WISE BEE outbroke the field, set a swift pace and opened up a good gap in the early stages, came wide entering the stretch, but continued courageously when the final issue came and outlasted CHARLIEINFELD. Flinchum lodged a claim of foul which was allowed. CHARLIEINFELD broke a trifle slow, made up ground steadily on the outside, was carried out and bumped by the winner entering the stretch and then hung right at the end. RAISE UP, a keen factor, from the start, faltered through the stretch, yet outlasted PLOWSHARE. The latter, under extreme pressure all the way, would have been third in a few more strides.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

Well, the Benningites really broke out with a rash of winners yesterday. Six of our first choices scampered home—the last five winners on the program. That's where I like them. You can't go home broke if you have the last winner, unless of course, the rent man is waiting for you to get out of the line. Tony Weaver, Calexico, Charlie Infeld, Cuckoo, Prince Splendor and El Puma were our success. True, it took a disqualification to get us home in one instance. I received so many four-line rhymes for my Wireless Windbag contest that I couldn't open all of them. I took this one out of the pack catch-as-catch can: "Art's voice is bad enough, but when he starts to sing; I wish he had some strings to pull, to make him sound like Bing." This is from Mrs. J. L. over in Alexandria. "Can I send some more?" she asks. The more the merrier. In case you haven't been reading this (and I don't blame you), I'm conducting a heckle Art Brown contest. A badge for the Bowie meeting goes to the reader who sends in the best rhyme on the WOL breeze. No strings attached. Send as many as you wish. Keep them clean and mail them to Bennings, Washington Post. Brown, by the way, opens another week at the Capitol Theater today. If you want inspiration, look him over. Bowie, I'm told, will not use the Puett starting gate at the coming meeting. I understand the Bahr gate people have put a front on their gate and that will be used. I'm glad to see by the papers that Jockey Buddy Root is riding an occasional winner in Havana. He will return to Maryland and should be back to top condition. Root was seriously injured at Marlboro last August. Well, let's see if we can let Confucius rest again today and pick six.

BILL.

North Am. Co. Sets Revenue Peak in Year

Net Income of $1.84 A Share Is 18.8% Above 1938 Profit

The fiftieth annual report of the North American Co., of which Potomac Electric Power Co., and Capital Transit Co. are units, released yesterday shows all-time high records in electric output and electric revenues of subsidiaries in 1939. Net earnings were higher than in the preceding year and, except for 1937, higher than in any year since 1931.

Net income for the year, on a new basis of consolidation of accounts of subsidiaries, amounted to $20,718,862, equal after preferred dividends to $1.99 on each of 8,573,467 shares of North American common stock outstanding. This is on the basis of changes in North American's percentage of ownership of common stock of two subsidiaries, Washington Railway & Electric Co. and North American Light & Power Co.

Ownership of voting stock of the former, it is pointed out, fell below 50 per cent due to the special dividend on North American common stock paid December 29 in participating units of the Washington company's common stock, and the latter's accounts are no longer consolidated. North American's ownership of common stock of North American Light & Power Co., on the other hand, has now been increased to 84 per cent and its accounts are consolidated for the first time.

New Accounting System

In order to make a comparison of 1939 with 1938, the report gives financial and other statistics of operation of the same companies for both years. On this old basis of consolidation of accounts, net income for 1939 was $19,434,208, equal after preferred dividends to $1.84 a common share, which compares with earnings of $15,109,007 in 1938, equal to $1.55 a common share. This was an increase of 18.8 per cent.

Corporate earnings of North American, which do not include the portion of net income of subsidiaries retained by them in their surplus accounts, were equal after preferred dividends to $1.57 per share of common stock for 1939 as against $1.38 for 1938. Operating revenues increased 5.7 per cent to $123,238,720, toward which electric revenues alone contributed $100,906,039.

United Air Sets Passenger Record

Chicago, March 7.—United Air Lines established another new passenger traffic mark in February by flying an estimated total of 9,354,100 revenue passenger miles for a gain of 66 per cent over the 5,628,531 revenue passenger miles flown in February, 1939, it was announced yesterday by R. W. Ireland, general traffic manager.

The February figure represents an all-time high for the month, Ireland said, and a substantial increase in the percentage of gain over January when the increase over a year ago was 57 per cent.

Pontiac Motors Sets February Record

Pontiac, Mich., March 7 (AP).—Pontiac motor division of General Motors Corporation announced today its retail deliveries of new cars last month numbered 14,661, the greatest February distribution in the company's history. January deliveries totaled 13,760 units and those of February a year ago 9,177.

The company reported 9,541 unfilled orders on hand, compared with 2,022 at the end of February, 1939. February sales of used cars numbered 32,098, compared with 22,489 in the like month last year.

11 Months' Air Travel Without An Accident

Chicago, March 7 (AP).—At midnight, February 26, the domestic scheduled air lines of the United States completed 11 months without a fatality, the Air Transport Association of America announced today. During the period, the lines flew 78,460,700 plane miles and carried 1,895,700 passengers, for a total of 737,450,000 passenger miles.

Wheat Edges Higher Despite Selling Spells

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 7.—Overcoming frequent spells of nervous selling, the wheat market worked upward gradually with maximum gains of as much as 2 cents carrying prices to the best level in two weeks.

May wheat reached $1.05⅛, within 2 cents of the peak reached February 23 and within 4⅝ cents of the season's high. Buying was inspired largely by pessimistic crop reports from the Southwestern hard winter wheat belt and figures showing need of moisture in the spring wheat zone as well as improved export business in North American grain, including some United States Pacific Coast wheat sold to Russia and 350,000 bushels of Canadian to continental Europe.

Wheat closed 1¾ higher than yesterday; May, $1.04⅝@$1.04½; July, $1.02⅜@$1.02¼; corn ⅛ to ¼ up; May, 57⅛; July, 57⅝; oats ¼ down to ⅜ up; rye 1⅛@1¼ higher and lard unchanged to 3 lower.

Cuba Largest Buyer of Rayon Made in America

New York, March 7 (AP).—Exports of rayon from the United States measured by pounds and dollars broke all records in 1939, although still relatively small compared to domestic consumption, the Textile Economics Bureau said today.

The dollar value of the estimated 12,000,000 pounds of rayon exported during the year was $15,300,000, compared with 1938's previous peak of $11,000,000 and a low of $2,400,000 in 1933.

Cuba was the largest single consumer, taking 25 per cent of United States shipments, with the rest of the West Indies accounting for a good share. Second best customer was the Union of South Africa, with the Philippines, Canada and the United Kingdom following in that order. United Kingdom takings were about on a level with the previous year, but all other customers took more.

February shipments of rayon filament yarn to domestic consumers totaled 29,700,000 pounds in February, compared with 31,400,000 for January, a longer month. The two-month total was 16 per cent above the 52,800,000 pounds delivered for the corresponding 1939 period.

Stocks of rayon yarn held by American producers at the end of February totaled 8,300,000 pounds, compared with 7,000,000 pounds at the end of January.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler
A Special Correspondent

Stocks Continue to Edge Upward; Aircrafts and Motors Prominent; Treasury and Nordic Bonds Firm

New York, March 7.—Selected buying of high grade stocks gave security markets a good foundation today, but the speculative favorites milled around after going higher in the morning and closed irregular. The list as a whole, however, recorded a net advance for the fourth successive day, the composite for the 100 stocks being up 0.11 point.

Further improvement in sterling rates, up 2⅝ cents for the day, featured transactions in foreign exchange. Sterling, at the last quoted price was approximately 5 cents above its low. French and Belgian francs also went higher. Commodities made headway, cotton adding 2 to 4 points and wheat 1 to 1¾ cents.

With market levels hovering around the year's high, 60 of the 775 issues traded established new 1940 tops, including Eastern Airlines, American Colortype, Cluett Peabody, Motor Products, National Acme, Bulova Watch, American Airlines, Newberry, Safeway Stores, Bendix, Ex-Cell-O, Glenn Martin, Wright Aero and Thermoid common and preferred.

Curtiss-Wright the Leader

Curtiss-Wright was the market leader and all of the aeronautical issues were prominent. Motors and manufacturing blue chips were the only divisions to show any substantial net gains. Switching to the former from other sections has been in evidence for a couple of weeks, or since the motor vehicle makers were obliged to step up production schedules in line with heavy consumer demand for the new models. Oils and utilities held a part of their rise. Power shares have shown a tendency to attract buyers since selling based on the SEC.

Integration Abates

Integration ukases abated last week. Stores were steady. Rail issues did little following announcement of the week's loadings, indicating an increase in freight business of seasonal size. In the copper group Cerro de Pasco was quite buoyant as observers estimated orders would accrue to the company as a result of new copper requirements by the French government. There was some quiet buying of mercantile shares which coincided with appearance of 1940 sales reports. Johns-Manville featured building descriptions with a 1¾ rise in common and a larger gain in preferred following publication of its favorable 1939 earnings in morning newspapers.

Allied Chemical Higher

Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak and a few other seasoned stocks added a point or more. Standard Oil of New Jersey and Du Pont each gained ⅝. Also on the plus side were Dunhill International, Montgomery Ward, Masonite, Link Belt, Phillips Petroleum, United Carbon and Timken. Investment buying brought a new high for American Telephone, which closed ⅞ higher at its best price of the day. Chemicals made some progress. Some of the preferreds scored wide gains, including Tri-Continental and United States and foreign securities.

In at least one brokerage house letter attention was called to the unfavorable reaction to President Roosevelt's criticism of census objections, and cited this as likely to help the Republicans and others who are against the wilder forms of New Deal policy. It was emphasized that the President's attack on the Dies committee provided the spark which gave it new life and that his criticism in the census squabble may make it an election issue.

Bonds Dull But Firm

Although the listed bond market remained dull today, there were a few spots of strength. United States Treasury obligations were marked higher, and Scandinavian government issues also did well. The long list of corporate bonds showed only minor variations, with gains more numerous than losses. Trading amounted to $8,320,000.

The upswing in Treasury loans began when it appeared to dealers and others that the Treasury does not intend to issue more long bonds for the time being, and will pay from cash resources the called 3⅜ per cent issue. The movement carried levels up another half-point in some long issues today, while others showed smaller gains. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were firm.

Finland's 6s were up nearly 2 points on reports of peace overtures, but only two bonds were traded. Helsinki 6½s jumped three points. Danish and Norwegian issues, however, advanced one to six points. Belgian and Italian obligations showed hardly any change. Belligerent country issues were irregular, with the undertone firm. Uruguay issues were strong in the Latin-American group.

Time Nets $13.63; $4.76 in 1938

New York, March 8.—Time Incorpated, publishers of Time, Life, Fortune and Architectural Forum magazines, and producers of the March of Time, today reported net profit of $3,206,751 for 1939, or $13.63 per share on the 235,242 common shares outstanding, compared with $1,129,422, or $4.76 per share, in 1938.

The annual report showed gross sales of $29,311,057 last year compared with $23,594,089 the previous year. Current assets were up $2,537,104 to $10,793,803, including $7,459,384 of cash and marketable securities.

"Last year," said Henry R. Luce, chairman of the board, in his letter accompanying the annual report to stockholders, "I said that the most significant fact about Life in 1938 was that its regular subscription list increased to more than 900,000 (in addition to the larger number buying it each week on the newsstands) and that 'this was done by the sound method of steadily improving the editorial content of the magazine.' This process has continued, and I am glad to be able to report that Life contributed substantially to the net profit of the company in 1939.

"Time, the Weekly Newsmagazine, continued to be the largest contributor to the profit result for the year. It also maintained its strong position in the advertising field by ranking second among weekly magazines in the number of advertising pages carried during the year."

New York Again Lowers Bank Clearings

New York 8.6% Off, 21 Other Leading Cities 0.9% Higher

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—Bank clearings for the latest week followed the trend generally in evidence for some months past. The shrinkage in the New York total, which bulks large in the aggregate for the country, again pulled the turnover for all cities below the level of last year, despite varying gains reported for all of the outside cities.

Total clearings for 22 leading cities for the week ended March 6, as compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, totaled $5,534,498,000, compared with $55,584,983,000 for the same 1939 week, or a decrease of 0.9 per cent.

For this current week, a full six-day week, there was a rise of $772,111,000 over the total for the preceding five-day week. In a comparison between corresponding weeks last year, when both periods represented full weeks, the gain was only $146,460,000.

The turnover at New York amounted to $3,306,192,000, against $3,618,572,000 last year, giving a drop of 8.6 per cent. The 21 cities outside of New York had a total of $2,228,306,000, which was 13.3 per cent larger than the $1,966,414,000 recorded in the like 1939 week.

Credits for Farm Purchases Rise 32% in Quarter

A. G. Black, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, said yesterday that the amount of credit extended by the Federal land banks and the Land Bank Commissioner to finance the purchase of farms increased 32 per cent during the last quarter of 1939 compared to the 1938 fourth quarter.

In the recent quarter 4,979 farmers obtained $12,832,200 of mortgage loans and other credit from the land banks and commissioner to assist in buying farms, compared to $9,724,000 in the comparable period of 1938. The largest percentage of farms financed were purchased from the land banks and commissioner—a smaller proportion from private sources.

For the full year 1939, approximately $45,526,000 of mortgage loans and other credit was extended by the land banks and commissioner to assist in farm purchasing. The number of properties purchased was 17,722.

L. C. Smith Votes 12½ Cents a Share On Common Stock

New York, March 7.—Directors of L. C. Smith & Corona Typewriters, Inc. have declared a dividend of 12½ cents a share on the common stock and the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on the preferred stock, both payable April 1 to stockholders of record March 15.

In announcing the dividend action, H. W. Smith, president, said that unfilled orders for L. C. Smith typewriters at the end of February showed an increase of 82 per cent over the end of February last year.

Victor Chemical 30 Cents

Victor Chemical Works announced today declaration of a dividend of 30 cents a capital share, payable March 30 to holders of record March 20.

T. & Western Air Cuts 1938 Deficit

Chicago, March 7.—A net operating loss of $188,827.03 was sustained by Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., during 1939, according to the annual report of the airline issued today by Jack Frye, president.

The report showed a wide margin of improvement over the preceding year, however, and predicted considerable "improvement in our relative position" in 1940. The 1939 figures showed a 39 per cent increase in passenger revenues as well as increases in air mail and air express revenues, which reduced the year's deficit to more than $560,000 under the 1938 loss of $749,355.31.

Frye said that although further losses might be anticipated during the first quarter of 1940, due to the increased costs necessary to meet expected increases in traffic, he believed 1940 would show considerable improvement in the airline's competitive position in the industry.

Much of this he said hinges upon the airline's expansion program, now pending before the Civil Aeronautics Authority, under which T. W. A. has asked permission to build up its route structure by the addition of new "feeder lines" to the airline's coast-to-coast system.

New York, March 7 (AP).—Steel mills in America will operate at 64.6 per cent of capacity this week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. This represented a decline of 1.3 points from 65.9 per cent of capacity last week and will be the lowest since the week of September 5 last year, which included the Labor Day holiday. A month ago operations were at the rate of 71.7 per cent of capacity and a year ago 55.1 per cent.

Steel mills have steadily curtailed output since the start of the year but the declines have been becoming progressively smaller. Trade gossip held out hopes the bottom in the present recession might soon be reached.

Kroger Grocery Co.

Cincinnati, March 7 (AP).—An 8 per cent increase in sales, from $18,027,803 to $19,399,140, was reported today by the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., for the second four-week period of 1940, over the corresponding period of last year. Cumulative sales for the year were $37,604,106, or 7 per cent above the 1939 total of $35,196,740.

Coastwise Ships Ask Big Rate Rise

New York, March 7 (AP).—Owners of about 100 American steamships engaged in Atlantic-Pacific coastal shipping—the largest segment of the United States merchant marine—applied today to the Maritime Commission for the right to raise freight charges 5 to 20 per cent. Only the rates for carrying grain and lumber would be unaffected by the rise, although it was understood the carriers were debating the advisability of asking higher rates on lumber.

Chief reason for the boost is the present shortage of ships in the coast-to-coast trade, it being estimated in shipping circles that about 35 have been withdrawn for use in the transatlantic runs made more profitable by the European war.

Steel Ingot Output Falls Under January

New York, March 7 (AP).—Steel ingot production during February totaled 4,374,625 net tons the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today. The January total was 5,619,698 tons.

Although representing lower operations, and a shorter month than the previous month, the February figure was more than 30 per cent above the February, 1939, total of 3,347,288 net tons of open-hearth and Bessemer Steel ingots produced.

Business Index Lowest Since October

New York, March 7 (AP).—Time magazine's index of business conditions declined last week from 98.2 to 97.2, the lowest point since October 25. A year ago the index stood at 95.1.

Lower spending in both trade and financial centers was responsible for the drop in the index, which is designed to reflect changes in underlying conditions likely to affect the volume of business.

Iron Firemen Co. Enters Low Cost Field

Cleveland, March 7 (AP).—Iron Firemen Co. announced today that it would increase newspaper advertising 50 to 100 per cent this year to push sales of a new stoker intended for installation in houses costing $3,000 to $5,000.

In the past the company has concentrated on houses costing $5,000 or more.

Retail Advertising Steady for Week

Chicago, March 7.—Compared with the same week last year, retail newspaper advertising in 80 major cities showed practically no change during the week ended February 24, Advertising Age, national advertising newspaper, reported today.

For that week total retail linage for all newspapers in the 80 cities measured was 16,646,250 lines, off about 12,000 lines from the 16,658,488 lines carried last year, or 0.1 per cent.

Engineering Awards Higher in Week

New York, March 7 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday totaled $39,308,000, a gain of 7 per cent over the corresponding week a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported today. Volume, however, was 33 per cent less than the preceding week because of a sharp decline in public contracts.

Industrial and commercial building increased during the week, lifting private construction awards 28 per cent above the previous week and 62 per cent above a year ago.

Commodity Loans

The Commodity Credit Corporation reported yesterday that corn loans made through March 1 under the 1939 program totaled $120,696,028 and covered 212,109,511 bushels. Wheat loans made through February 23 under the 1939 program amounted to $96,818,679, covering 137,636,377 bushels.

Bolivia to Develop National Oil Fields

La Paz, Bolivia, March 7 (AP).—The government announced today that it would spend 73,000,000 bolivianos ($2,098,750) to step up oil production in the San Andita field and enlarge refineries there with machinery to be purchased in the United States.

The objective, the announcement said, is to produce all of the gasoline needed in Bolivia, and to begin production of fuel oil and diesel oil. Fuel and diesel oil are now imported. Bolivian gasoline consumption this years is estimated at 26,094,513 liters (about 164,000 barrels, compared with 6,750,000 liters (42,000 barrels) in 1939.

Cotton Pushes Through Light Opposition

Closing Prices Are 10 to 25 Cents a Bale Above Wednesday

New York, March 7 (AP).—Cotton futures inched ahead through only minor opposition today. Closing prices were up 2 to 5 points. Hedging sales were the chief source of contracts. Domestic mill buying and covering by spot cotton interests were sufficient to give the list a boost. Speculative forces found new crop months an attractive buy when they heard tardiness in preparation and planting of seeds had been accenttuated by dry conditions in the Western belt.

Many traders were disappointed that the flurry of textile buying a week ago failed to develop into a more substantial business, which tended to check trade in futures.

Cloth sales for the week are expected to fall short of production by a sizable margin and reports of further curtailment by Southern and New England mills continued to filter through trade quarters.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures advanced today, due more to the reluctance of holders to part with contracts than aggressive buying. Final prices were up 3 to 7 points.

Continued firmness in the crude oil market and the advance in grains restricted selling while buyers were cautious in view of the lagging price trend in lard and hogs.

Sales totaled 57 lots:

Sales totaled 97 lots; March, *7.08; May, *7.15; July, *7.23; September, 7.31; October, 7.30. (—Bid.)

Crude oil was quoted at 6 cents bid in the Southeast and Valley and 5¾@6⅛ in Texas.

Racing Sheet Accused in Affidavit

Baltimore Sports Daily Said to Be On "Annenberg Plan"

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 7.—The Howard Sports Daily, Inc., of Baltimore, was described as a link in a Nation-wide horse-racing news dissemination service similar to the Moe Annenburg system in an affidavit filed today with the Public Service Commission.

Annenberg service which spanned the Nation was recently discontinued after a Federal Government investigation of its operations, but Samuel Klaus, special assistant to the United States attorney for the northern District of Illinois, asserted in today's affidavit employes of the system had started a new one.

The affidavit was filed with the Western Telegraph Co.'s answer to the commission's order that it show case why its service to the Howard Sports Daily should not be continued. The telegraph company, acting on information given it by the Federal Government, had given notice service would be discontinued February 16. The Howard Sports Daily appealed to the Public Service Commission.

Frank Harper, commission secretary, said a hearing on the matter probably would be set next week. The telegraph company already has discontinued interstate service to the Sports Daily, as it is under the commission's jurisdiction. It now is seeking to discontinue service for the Sports Daily's operations within Maryland.

Klaus said "a Nation-wide plan has been discovered to be in operation for the continuance of essentially the same service as operated by Annenberg.

"Service is being obtained in one form or another from the race tracks and being sent through central clearing points to bookmakers . . . the plaintiff here (the Howard Sports Daily) appears clearly to be a participant in that plan."

Stanford to Scuttle Warner Football System After 17 Years

Shaughnessy Plans To Introduce Style He Used at Chicago

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, March 7.—Stanford University will abandon the so-called "Warner system" of football this season after 17 years of varied success with it.

Clark Daniel Shaughnessy, new Stanford coach, disclosed today he would introduce his own type of play. The former University of Chicago mentor whose job was lifted from under him when the institution dropped the sport last fall, favors a more open style, featuring flankers and similar formations.

CLARK SHAUGNESSY

Starts Speaking

Shaughnessy arrived today from Chicago and was the principal speaker at the Northern California Football Writers Association luncheon. Later he answered questions.

Reminded the team he will take over already is grounded in the wingback formations and style of play devised by Glenn Scobey Warner, and carried out by the latter's successor, C. E. Thornhill, the new Stanford leader said he would start "from the ground up." It will not be a complete evolution, however, as Shaughnessy employs variations of Warner football along with other methods.

Abandonment of the sport at Chicago was a mistake, in Shaughnessy's opinion.

"I am not in accord with what happened and am 1,000 per cent for intercollegiate football," he said. "I very much regretted to see that fine university make the step."

Discussing his new position, Shaughnessy declined to make any predictions but assured his listeners he would produce a team that would gamble for points.

He voiced opposition to scouting rival teams with the use of motion picture cameras and said he would not accept scouting information not assembled in accordance with the rules.

15 Victories Guaranteed by Mr. Carrasquel

Nats' Venezuelan On Second Thought, Pitcher Says Fifty

complained yesterday. "He doesn't say anything I can make out."

The Nats secretary added glumly that Alex "seems no better than he was last year at the English language." Then he barked:

"Fifteen games—that's your guarantee for this season, isn't it? Fifteen games or it's no account!"

The statuesque Venezuelan gave out with another wide grin and boomed, "sure thing."

"That's about all I can get him to understand," Eynon confessed sadly, adding as an afterthought:

"But I did get it over about this income tax thing. All morning I kept saying 'taxes, taxes, taxes' to Alex, and he finally got it."

Eynon then drew out Carrasquel's non-resident alien income tax form, and the Venezuelan winced visibly, thus indicating he at least understands Uncle Sam's tactics if not the language.

"How much do you weigh, Alex?" Eynon demanded.

"Weigh? Yeah," Alex smiled happily.

The Nats secretary heaved an exasperated sigh and explained Alex is 10 pounds heavier than he was last year. He'll have to work that off in the Orlando camp, despite the fact his late arrival throws him a week behind in the training routine.

Just Didn't Care!

All last year Manager Bucky Harris tried to beat into Alex' make-up the determination to win games. The beefy Venezuelan started out like a pitching dream but ended up as something of a nightmare. Harris thought it was indifference. That seemed changed yesterday, however.

Alex explained haltingly that he's pitched four games down in South America over the winter, admitted that he's spent most of the time fishing and then with a great effort bawled in English:

"I win 50 games this year."

He came to Washington from New York after a four-day ocean trip necessitated by the war's influence on sea travel. He couldn't get a boat direct from Venezuela to Cuba or a Florida port.

Cook, Douglas Get Augusta Bestball

Augusta, Ga., March 7 (U.P.).—Jim Cook, Chicago, and Charlie Douglas, Rochester, N. Y., today carded a best-ball 65 for top honors in the first day of the annual golfing jamboree which precedes the Masters' Tournament.

Four teams tied for second with 66s. They were Frank Mulherin, Augusta, and C. J. Schoo, Springfield, Mass; Frank Willard, New York, and Charles Ruprecht, Philadelphia; Bob Barker, Paterson, N. J., and Richmond Lewis, Long Meadow, Mass.; Fielding Wallace, Augusta, and Sam Cook, Syracuse, N. Y.

Profitable 'Break' Seen For Sandlot Baseball

Wichita, Kans., March 7 (A.P.).—It's going to be worth while for sandlot baseball teams to send players into organized professional ball this year.

The national semipro baseball congress today announced it would give $100 to a team when one of its players makes good in higher classification with the hopes the award will encourage managers to develop young players rather than cater to older players.

Colgate Basketball Team Elects Captain

Hamilton, N. Y., March 7 (A.P.).—Hank Fawcett, star guard from Canton, Ohio, today was elected captain of the Colgate basketball team for next year. He succeeds Don Collins, of Leonia, N. J.

In the season just closed Fawcett led the quintet in scoring with 161 points and in most games he was a key man on offense and defense.

Fort Hunt CCC Five Beats Central Branch

Fort Hunt CCC Shamrock basketeers defeated the Central Branch Boys Club five, 56 to 54, yesterday on the latter's court.

Draganza tallied 18 points for the winners. Mandes was high scorer for the losers with 22 points.

Pairings Made In Invitational Cage Tourney

Rice Disappointed in Not Receiving Bid; New York U. Declines

By the Associated Press

New York, March 7.—Six college basketball teams with a combined season's record of 103 victories and only 15 defeats will compete in the invitational college basketball tournament next week in Madison Square Garden.

Playing hosts to as fine a field as the 3-year-old tournament has ever boasted are Clair Bee's Long Island University Blackbirds and St. John's University of Brooklyn.

Bringing a challenge from outside the metropolitan area are a smart DePaul team, a corking good Duquesne outfit, Colorado, champions of the Big Seven Conference, and Henry P. Iba's mighty Oklahoma Aggies.

Rice Disappointed

Everything had been done today—final acceptances were in, the draw was made, and everybody was happy—except bitterly disappointed Rice Institute, champions of the Southwest, and New York University, one of the Nation's finest teams.

Rice had accepted an invitation that never was sent and so excited were they that banners were hung on the campus with the words, "On to New York." New York, beaten but once in a rigorous 19-game schedule, couldn't accept both the metropolitan invitation and the national collegiate offer, so the faculty committee on athletics made them refuse both—in spite of a demonstration by the players.

Monday, Long Island, a goodly staffed remnant of last year's championship team and winner of 20 of its 23 games this year plays DePaul, also winner of 20, from Purdue, Oregon, and Santa Clara among others. They've played each other twice this year—splitting a double bill here and in Chicago.

St. John's in Nightcap

The second game pits Joe Lapchick's St. John's team, triumphant in 15 of 19, against Duquesne, beaten in an arduous 19-game season only by Indiana in an overtime tussle.

Wednesday night Colorado, hailed by the State's sports-minded governor as the best team in the school's history, will play the winner of the Long Island-DePaul game, and the Oklahoma Aggies, winner of its last 25 games after losing the opener to Kansas by 34-30, pits its cautious style of play against the St. John-Duquesne victor.

The final game will be played Friday.

As a result of its spectacular triumph, Bethesda won a semifinal meeting with Roosevelt on Saturday. The game will be the last half of a double-header, Eastern and Gonzaga meeting in the opener.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

I. N. sends a slam hand on which you may test your playing ability. In case you are becoming a little "set up" about your game, this may take you down a peg or two. Or, if you are one of the unfortunates whose partners are continually snatching the contract, correct solving of this problem may bolster your self-assurance.

The cards and bidding are shown in today's box. The contract is six spades, doubled. Make your plan before reading the solution offered by I. N., which follows.

Today's Hand

5 ♠	Pass	6 ♠	Dble.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ♡.

Solution

The opening lead is won with the king of hearts, and a small spade is returned, declarer winning with the ace. A heart is led to the ace, and a low heart trumped on the way back. Three rounds of clubs and three rounds of diamonds are taken, ending in the dummy, and the last heart is trumped with the jack of spades.

At this point West is down to three spades. If he ever trumps the spade jack he is end-played and must lead a spade away from his ten-eight, letting declarer take both the nine and the queen. If he refuses to over trump, he must under trump, in which case he will make only his king, as declarer's next lead will be a low spade to dummy's queen-seven.

South makes six spades, losing one trump trick.

I am slightly handicapped by yesterday's promise not to mention a certain subject which for lack of a better phrase we must call "WJSV's rise to 50,000 watts." I am also slightly handicapped by an extremely large head at the moment, brought on, I am sure, by mixing sarsparilla with Mickey Finns at last night's dedicatory ceremonies.

It was so nice to see Bob Trout taking part in a WJSV ceremony. He's been trying now for eight years. In 1932 when WJSV became a Columbia station, Robert was in there doing the best he could. Since that date every time WJSV opened a new studio, or celebrated an anniversary or did anything that required the Trout talent Robert was out gallivanting around the country peddling something for some sponsor or other or accompanying the Presidential train.

James Hurlbut, the WJSV news hawk, is sprouting a moustache which under the Willard's soft lights made him look like Boake Carter.

The gay, happy executives made a nice contrast to the engineering folk who were at the party. The execs have been bearing up nicely under the strain of tossing together $300,000 worth of transmitter, signing check after check. But the engineers, who have been knocking off a luxurious four hours sleep per night for the past couple of weeks seemed pretty happy the whole thing was over.

Incidentally, Madeline Ensign, Frank Blair and that Walter Compton person over at WOL are nice folks. They dreamt up a lovely salute to WJSV and broadcast it. Sporting, indeed. There's not much we can do in return except continue our 24-hour service of explaining what "30" means at the end of Compton's broadcasts and columns.

One of the saddest events in connection with the celebration is the Case McDonald. Because of the shindig Arch McDonald was granted an extra week's stay in the croooel, croooel sentence which sends him to Orlando, Fla to spend a couple of weeks with the Nats. He's off, shortly, however.

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

"Pfui! Bosnian forest concessions from a Donevitch!" said Wolfe. "As soon as I saw that girl and heard her voice I knew the devil was around."

Nero Wolfe and his confidential secretary, Archie Goodwin, one day had two surprising visitors who kept Wolfe from his orchids but not from his beer. The first was Carla Lovchen who asked Wolfe's help for her friend, Neya Tormic. Each of these young women from the Balkans taught fencing in a nearby studio where Neya had been accused of stealing diamonds from a pupil. Wolfe, remembering some dislike many years gone, flatly refused, to Archie's surprise. Later, Archie and his boss played hosts to Stahl, an F. B. I. man, who politely inquired into Wolfe's possible representation of some foreign principal, which Wolfe denied. Stahl elicited some information concerning Wolfe's boyhood experiences in the Balkans, but learned that he knew only slightly the old Prince Peter Donevitch and his nephew, young Prince Stefan.

Chapter 3

DURING MEALS Wolfe ordinarily excludes business not only from his conversation but also from his mind. But that day it appeared that his thoughts were straying from the food, though I didn't see how they could have been on business, since there was none on hand. He did his share of demolition to the remains of three ducks—his old friend Marco Vukcic had dined with us the day before—but there was an air of absent-mindedness in his ardor as he tore the backbones apart and scraped the juicy shreds off with his gleaming white teeth. It somewhat prolonged the operations, so that it was after 2 o'clock when we finished with the coffee and waddled back to the office. That is, he waddled. I strode.

Then, instead of resuming with the catalogues or playing with some other of his toys, he leaned back and clasped his hands over the duck repository and shut his eyes. It wasn't a coma, for several times during the hour he sat there I saw his lips push in and out, so I knew he was hard at work on something.

Suddenly he spoke.

"Archie. What made you say that girl wanted to borrow a book?"

So he hadn't been able to get his mind off of Montenegrin females. I waved a hand. "Persiflage. Chaff."

"No. You said she asked if I had read it."

"Yes, sir."

"And if I study it."

"Yes, sir."

"And are you reading it."

"Yes, sir."

He nearly opened his eyes. "Did it occur to you that she was finding out if either of us would be apt to look at that book in the immediate future?"

"No, sir. My mind was occupied. I was sitting down and she was standing in front of me and I was thinking about her curves."

"That is not thought. Those nerves are in the spinal column, not the brain. You said it was United Yugoslavia by Henderson."

"Yes, sir."

"Where was it when you returned to the office?"

"On the shelf where it belongs. She had put it back herself. For a Monteneg—"

"Get it, please."

I CROSSED the room and got it down and took it to him. He rubbed the cover caressingly with his palm, as he always did with a book, and then turned it with its front edge facing him, squeezed it tight shut and held it for a moment, and suddenly released the pressure. Then he opened it around the middle and took out a piece of paper that was there between the leaves. The paper was folded, and he unfolded it and started reading it. I sat down and set my teeth on my lip to hold in what might otherwise have come out. I set them hard.

"Indeed," Wolfe said. "Shall I read it to you?"

"Oh, please do, yes, sir."

He began an incoherent jabber and splutter that didn't even sound human. I knew he expected me to butt in with an outcry, so I set my teeth again. When he had finished I grinned at him.

"Okay," I said, "but why couldn't she tell me to my face how handsome and seductive I was and so on instead of writing it down and sticking it in that book. Especially that last—"

"And especially writing it in Serbo-Croat. Do you speak Serbo-Croat, Archie?"

"No."

"Then I'll translate. It's dated at Zagreb, August 20, 1938, and bears the Donevitch crest. It says, roughly, 'The bearer of these presents, my wife, the Princess Vladanka Donevitch, is hereby empowered without reservation to talk and act in my name, and attach my name and honor by her signature, which appears herewith below my own, in all financial and political matters and claims pertaining to me and to the Donevitch dynasty, with particular reference to Bosnian forest concessions and to the disposal of certain credits at present in the care of Barrett & De Russy, bankers, of New York. I bespeak for her loyalty from those who owe it, and cooperation from those whose interests ride with mine.'"

Wolfe folded the paper and imprisoned it under his palm. "It is signed Stefan Donevitch and Vladanka Donevitch. The signatures are attested."

"Good." I glared at him. "He even spent two bits on a notary. Let's take one thing at a time. How did you know that thing was in that book?"

"I didn't know it. But her questioning you——"

"Sure. Your curiosity got aroused. Check that off. Do you mean to say that that girl is a Balkan princess?"

"I don't know. Stefan married only three years ago. I got that from this book. Don't badger me, Archie. I don't like this."

"What don't you like about it?"

"I like nothing about it. Of all the activities of man, international intrigue is the dirtiest. The Balkan mess, as it is today, I know only superficially, but even on the surface the maggots of corruption may be seen writhing. The regent who rules Yugoslavia deviously courts the friendship of certain nations. He is a Karageorgevitch. Prince Stefan, the head of the Donevitch clan now that old Peter is dying, is being used by certain other nations, and he is using them for his own ambition. And now look at this!" He slapped the paper with his palm. "They bring this to America! If it could be used to destroy them all, I would use it!"

He puffed. "Bah!" He made a gesture of spitting, which I had seen him do only once before in the years I had lived under his roof. "Pfui! Bosnian forest concessions from a Donevitch! As soon as I saw that girl and heard her voice I knew the devil was around. Confound them for crossing the ocean and stepping on this shore—confound her for coming here, here to my office, and soiling one of my books with this—this nauseous——"

"Hold it," I cautioned him. "Breathe deep three times. How do you know she put it there? It's been months since you've had that book down, and maybe somebody——"

"Who? When?"

"Lord, I don't know. Vukcic is a Montenegrin——"

"Gibberish."

I WAVED a hand. "All right, then the immigrant girl did it, and she's either an obnoxious Balkan princess or she's not, and so what and why? Is she in cahoots with evil forces in America, and will Mr. Stahl come back with a search warrant and find it and throw you in the coop? Is it a plant? Or did she swipe it from the princess and come here to cache it——"

"Archie."

"Yes, sir?"

"Address an envelope to Miss Carla Lovchen in care of the Nikola Miltan studio—get the address from the phone book. Put this thing in it and mail it at once. I don't want it here. I'll have nothing to do with it. I don't want—I send money to those young people over there because I know it's hard for even a Montenegrin to be brave on an empty stomach, but it's their stable now, not mine, and they'll have to clean it out. This is the first time—well, Fritz?"

Fritz Brenner, entering, advanced his three paces and announced:

"A young lady to see you, sir. Miss Carla Lovchen."

I made a noise. Wolfe blinked at him.

Fritz held to his formal stance, waiting. He had to wait a full two minutes, for Wolfe sat motionless, his lips puckered up, his forehead creased with a frown. Finally:

"Where is she?"

"In the front room, sir. I always think——"

"Shut that door and come here."

Fritz obeyed and was standing by the desk. Wolfe turned to me: "Address an envelope to Saul Panzer at his home and put a stamp on it."

I elevated the typewriter and followed instructions. As I put the stamp in the corner I inquired: "Registered or special?"

"No. Neither. That's another point for America; mail gets delivered intact and promptly. Let me have it." He inserted the folded paper in the envelope, licked the flap and pressed it down. "Here, Fritz, go to the box at the corner and drop it in. Immediately."
